The Rev. George Weinmann, pastor, invites all friends of the mission in the different languages of the In reading the life of St. Teresa we meet with many unusual super-natural tokens and visitations of the presence and the grace of our Divine Lord. And we might be induced to think that the way in which He led St. Teresa is so far above the way we walk in, that it affords no example to us. In this we should mislead our-selves. The end of her life was indeed upon high places, where the clouds conceal the paths of the saints from the eyes of ordinary Christians. She entered into ways of prayer and was favoured with visions of the Sa-cred Humanity which we may hardly ask for, and perhaps may never at-tain; but though the ending of her spiritual life transcends our common lot, the beginnings did not. She is to us, a direct and practical example especially in the point of her con-formity to the will of God, and the nobility it confers upon the soul. She set out on her journey towards the mountain of the Lord as we all do. Her trials and probation were the same as ours. She passed through the same stages in attaining to the higher path which wind out of sight in the mountain of perfection; and we must tread the same way if we would attain the vision of God in Eternity. That which was vouch-safed to her here is laid up, it may be, for us only hereafter. But the path is the same.

Obituary

JOHN MCGRATH John McGrath, 87, who retired in June, 1921, after 63 years' railroad service, died Mönday night at his home, 386 Broadway. Mr. McGrath was born in County

Kerry, Ireland, coming to this country when a boy. His railroad service was with the Eric Company, and he was a familiar figure on the trains running between Rochester and El-mirs. He was a baggageman.

Besides two daughters and two sons, Miss Anna R. McGrath, Mrs. W. F. Maloney, William J. and Ed-ward McGrath, he is survived by eight grandchildren and two great-grandchildren:
