Crowds Attracted To Novenas Given By Redemptorists

The great novenas of Wednesday, conducted by the Redemptorists of St. Joseph's Church, Franklin Street, in honor of Our Mother of Perpetual Help, in preparation for the feast of the Immaculate Conception closed Dec. 7, the vigil of the feast with solemn benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, the feast of St. Joseph, the Rev. Volmer, O.S.B., was celebrated: Rev. John Lynch, O.S.B., was deacon and Rev. Lawrence Thaler, O.S.B., sub-deacon and Rev. Charles Burger, O.S.B., Master of Ceremonies.

Every Wednesday in the Church Our Blessed Mother is honored throughout the year at 12:15 noon, at three in the afternoon and at eight in the evening. The 12:15 service is a recent devotion introduced during the novenas. It was made necessary by the large attendance. Not only the nave but the balcony was filled to capacity and many people stood during the devotions. Last Wednesday, it was announced that this noon day service which is of twenty minutes duration will be continued throughout the year.

The attendance and fervor at the novenas was a remarkable exhibition of faith. Several non-Catholics joined with their fellow Catholics in honoring Mary Immaculate. In the course of the novenas three letters of thanksgiving from the pen of non-Catholics were read to the congregation.

The next public novena it was announced will begin on January 27, and end on the Feast of the Annunciation March 25.

The devotions each Wednesday of the novenas consists of the singing of hymns, novenas, prayers, blessing of the altar, a sermon, the Holy Eucharist, benediction of the Blessed Sacrament and veneration of the miraculous picture of Our Lady of Perpetual Help. The closing of the novena was colorful and impressive.

Father Croty imparted the papal blessing to the congregation at the three services.

Prominent Store Executive Talks To Forman Staff. Distribution, not production, is the real problem that must be solved today by an America seeking the way out of the present business depression.

"I do not expect any fundamental changes. I do not expect any rapid changes. But I am confident that we shall pull ourselves together and put our business house in order."

Four hundred B. Forman Company employees were present at the breakfast and there were a number of prominent guests of honor at the speaking table. The employees presented an entertainment.

Three-minute speeches by the guest of honor paid tribute to B. Forman Company. In the Christmas message, Mr. Forman urged his employees:

"Keep up the good work. And if every member of this fine store family plays his or her part well, plays it cheerfully, plays it courteously, plays it with customer satisfaction as the primary, all-important objective, then our ship will come safely and successfully into harbor."

The Moon Tonight

The following poem was written by Edna Yager, a seventh grade pupil in one of our Catholic schools:

SPORT-O-GRAPHS By Insider

The eyes of the nation are turned Pacific Coastward tomorrow. Notre Dame, defeated, but not humiliated by Pittsburgh, plays the undefeated Southern California eleven in a game that goes far toward the determination of Who's Who in college football.

Howard Jones's Trojan victory over Stanford, California, Washington, Oregon, and other coast opposition, is the slight favorite, but it's very slight. Fans, especially the betting fraternity, haven't forgotten the efficient manner in which Notre Dame polished off the rough riding Army eleven, and the takers will be making money.

To our way of thinking, and we admit we've pondered the game as well as listened to the pros and cons of numerous smart laddies, Notre Dame will win. It took the Irish several games to show their real power, but the peak was reached in their victory over Stanford.

Southern California hasn't any Mohler, Notre Dame hasn't any Schwarzs, but the backed up Mohler, with his wealth of actual experience, will have whatever advantage there is to be enjoyed. Therein lies the difference between victory and defeat. Granting that the lines of the two teams are about equal, it appears to us that Notre Dame's half-backs will bring victory.

Notre Dame players, and because no team has ever beaten Notre Dame two years running. Notre Dame has a big score to settle. Last season, with twenty victories dangling from their belts, they lost a game to a team that was not a team at all.

Southern California has won eleven straight games. With each week and few of them have been hard games. The strain has become the greater. The Trojans may be thinking more of their winning streak than the one game with Notre Dame. If that's the case there's a psychological something in favor of Notre Dame before even the opening kick.

Notre Dame has lost this season to Pittsburgh. They won't have to fret and stew about a lengthy chart of wins. Southern California has a concern on their minds and it may mean defeat for them as a consequence.

Before closing our comments on this particular game, we pause to inquire: "Suppose Notre Dame defeats the Trojans, and then wins the Rose Bowl game?"

Study Groups Can Get Speakers Here Fr. Ryan Declares

It is not necessary to seek speakers in the city to address study groups or organizations interested in things intellectual the Rev. William P. Ryan, professor of St. Bernard's Seminary said in discussing "Catholicism and Culture" before the Columbian Council, Knights of Columbus, at the regular meeting held Thursday last week in Columbus Civic Center.

There are many well informed and capable speakers here, he said. In getting a speaker for any occasion, Father Ryan urged that those in charge take into consideration whether a speaker is sincere, honest, and whether such a speaker has some ulterior motive in putting a message across.

Father Ryan discussed culture in a broad sense stressing the necessity of a man thinking for himself and forming his judgment based upon dependable authority. He described the present day methods of propaganda and urged his listeners not to be misled.

It was Father Ryan's contention that the Catholic Press is needed today as never before and he urged those present to read the diocesan newspaper and their own "Columbian" national publication of the Knights of Columbus.

The club is under the direction of Harry Davenport. Catholic boys serving the diocesan newspaper in several of the parishes are getting an early start in the program of Catholic action. They deserve encouragement.

Priest Says Child's Religious Training Is Most Important Catholic Action Phase

The most important aspect of Catholic action is the religious and moral training of the Catholic child, the Rev. Joseph Baierl, S.T.D., professor at St. Bernard's Seminary, told members of the Sacred Heart Parish Parent-Teacher Association, Monday evening in the school hall.

"If we neglect the duty imposed on us and neglect to foster high ideals in the little ones, I fear all other activities of Catholic action will be greatly handicapped, if not entirely frustrated," Father Baierl said.

After describing what is meant by Catholic action which he said is a very broad activity entering into the field of education, economics, religion and culture, and designed to restore as far as possible Catholic ideals in the home and State, Father Baierl gave practical suggestions to the mothers for inculcating Catholic ideals.

The speaker urged the mothers to speak to their little boys and girls of His Holy Mother and the Saints; to teach morning and evening prayers, to say Grace at meals and to take the little children into Church occasionally at times other than when services are being conducted.

Catholic League basketball in Rochester, suffering from lack of attendance, goes on in the face of numerous obstacles, the least of which, at the moment, is the failure of fans to support the games. The players aren't thinking in terms of dollars and cents but are battling on, hoping for the break they think will come when the football team hereabouts decide to end their season. It is over.

The Catholic League clubs are being hit by the unfair tactics of the opposing Rochester District League teams, which bars no man, white or black, Catholic or non-Catholic. The Columbus Civic Center sponsored the Catholic League and ruled that only members of that faith participate. The Rochester District League organized at the same time and put the damper on the Catholic League the District Loop officials ruled that players in their organization be prohibited from participating in the Catholic League. All well and good there.

The District League, supposedly a strictly amateur club organization that depended only upon its existence by the funds that would be split at the end of the season, if any, began offering Catholics a hard fought affair, and enjoyed by the crowd. Then came the worst.

The District League, supposedly a strictly amateur club organization that depended only upon its existence by the funds that would be split at the end of the season, if any, began offering Catholics a hard fought affair, and enjoyed by the crowd. Then came the worst.

Elwood Hart, of St. Mary's, former U. of R. captain, quit the South Street team to join Spencerport. Tom A. Murray, the best player on the St. Boniface team, was induced to join the I. Y. M. A. In each case the District League staked the stars of the two teams in question.

Last week the District League, or one of its teams, attempted to break up the Holy Apostles quint, undefeated leaders of the Catholic League. Straight guarantees were offered to four of the five starting players of the Holy Apostles team. To their credit, all four laughed off the offer, which by the way, came from a well known club in the District League, a team that has no more chance of winning its league championship than Tommy Swales ever had of becoming Secretary of State.

Though the District League has belittled the Catholic loop at every turn, it seems that for all their boasts that they could get along, they simply must do something to cause the breakup of the Catholic loop or go bust themselves. As it is the team that leads the District League had to import a Buffalo player to get where they are. Without him that quint would be just another ball team. And it's supposed to be a "Rochester" District League!
