A CONTRACTOR OF THE PROPERTY O This is No. 6 of a Series Describing New Products being Manufactured by Long-Established Rochester Firms

To Meet New Needs ---To Open New Markets --

Pfaudler Offers Its "Junior" Series

The Pfaudier Company, originators and the world's largest builders of glass-lined steel equipment, manufacture huge steel tanks, kettles, lined with highly acid-resisting glass enamel. Their customers have been beverage manufacturers, dairymen, makers of chemical and pharmaceutical products, and similar industries where purity and cleanliness are essential.

Early in 1932 the Pfaudler Company introduced its "Jumor" Series of small well-built, but low-priced equipment. This series includes containers, mixers and storage tanks of from five to one hundred gallons capacity. Made of steel, glass lined, and manufactured in accordance with the exacting Pfaudler standards, this new series is being widely accepted for use in handling beverages, dyes, perfumes, food products, and the like. Hospital pharmacies find these small units most satisfactory for mixing and dispensing purposes.

The "Intermediate" Series fills the gap between the "Junior" Series and the larger process equipment. Included in this series is the "Multimixer," adaptable for mixing small quantities of a great variety of products such as mayonnaise, face and shaving creams, cake batter, and similar preparations.

The Praudler Company offers still another illustration of an industry adapting its manufacturing methods to meet new conditions, and thereby opening new markets for Rochester-made goods. Instead of marking time until conditions should improve, this industry is actively doing its part to make conditions better. This and other Rochester concerns are making a vital contribution to the country's ultimate economic recovery.
