Bowlers are to be graded in Classes A and B. and possibly C, to give every five-man team a crack at the money prizes. BAUSCH & LOMB PUT RAINBOWS TO WORK

The great arch of the rainbow, decking the skies after a storm, has always drawn the wondering admiration of man.

But rainbows even more marvelous than those of nature are revealed in Bausch & Lomb spectrographs.

Instead of the simple raindrops that break up the white light of the sun into its gorgeous colors, there are prisms of diamond-clear quartz. Spectrographs are used for the rapid analysis of industrial materials. The substance to be tested is transformed into luminous vapor in a gas flame or an electric arc. The light thus produced is exam-ined by the aid of the spectrograph. Each of the simple elements—iron, copper, lead, zinc, aluminum-emits, when incandescent, a characteristic light that records the presence of the particular element upon a photo graphic plate.

The presence of undesirable elements, present as impurities, is thus indicated. For each element has its own "rainbow."

Modern manufacturing makes extensive use of special alloys. Alert firms using and making such alloys have found Bausch & Lomb spectrographic equipment a saver of time and money.

Spectrographs—and other products made by the Bausch & Lomb Optical Com-embody new features, new improvements. The business conditions of the post-'29 period have not halted the development of new optical equipment. Bausch & Lomb is prepared to meet the coming of accelerated business activity; and in introducing im-proved devices designed to aid the manufacturer, this Rochester company is helping to hastén business recovery in Rochester and elsewhere.
