The recent organization of the Old Timers' Baseball Association, and the election to the Presidency of that group of gentlemen, of William J. Marks, who, in 1900, was the first temporary President of the Catholic Baseball League, has caused the Catholic Courier to delve into records of by-gone days in an effort to revive memories of teams and individuals in the Catholic League of yesteryear, which none will deny was the most powerful amateur and semi-professional league this city has ever known.

Mr. Carey's famed scrap book, yellow with age, has been loaned to the Catholic Courier. We assure no harm will come to this priceless record. The writer has perused the book and it vividly brought back games and incidents which, as a barefooted kid, he witnessed as many years ago.

We know the Old Timers will relish these reminiscences as much as we did. It was pleasant to read of the play of such star performers of those days as Phil Reggiesberger, Jimmy and Charles Heveron, Billy McNamara, Bill Karline, Lloyd-Waldeck, Charley Hall, Orrie Glasser, Paddy Boland, John Garin, Steve O'Rourke, Matty Cloonin, Jack Salen, "Mush" Finn, Ollie Legier, Billy Stupp, Walt McKoden, and scores of others, many of whom have passed over the Great Beyond.

At the outset a word about the formation of the League might not be out of order. The real organizers of the circuit were George Hawken and Emmett K. Courneen, of the Immaculate Conception parish. Both were active members of the Young Men's Society of that Church. Seeking some means of recreation for the members of the Society, they set about to choose a team from among its members.

This happened in the summer of 1899. The teams battled right down to the deciding fray, with the Immaculates winning the odd game. Little more was done until the next winter when invitations were sent to representatives of Cathedral, St. Monica's, SS. Peter and Paul, St.

Mary's, and St. Michael's, to join the Immaculates and St. Bridget's in the formation of a permanent organization. It was necessary for Hawken, Courneen and Marks to throw every bit of mature optimism that they possessed into the venture before four teams, i. e., Immaculates, St. Bridget's, Cathedral and St. Monica's, fell into line. St. Michael's, and SS. Peter and Paul begged off, due they claimed to lack of good enough playing material to adequately field a team.

While no continuity of games can be successfully adhered to, we have chosen the opening game of the season of 1903 to reproduce this week. The Immaculate Conception team, winners of the pennant in 1901 and 1902, opened the schedule against Holy Apostles, and started off its conquest to win its third pennant, which, by way of mention, it did. This game was played at South Park on May 15th, and, according to newspaper accounts, was witnessed by 2,500 fans.

Edward "Bucky" Shaughnessy and Charley Hawken were the points for the Immaculates, while "Lefty" Miller and "Ginger" Gallagher formed the Holy Apostle battery. Although supported badly in the field, Bucky was also given a lot of runs to work with, and he was able to "breeze home" after the fifth inning.

Paddy Boland, local contractor, whose younger brother, Bernie, pitched later for the Detroit Americans, was the leading hitter for Holy Apostles. Paddy duplicated Curvin's act of belting out a long drive for a homer. Boland, and Bert Major, also batted out three base hits. Gallagher, Miller, and Bill Moran each had a brace of hits. Boland, it may be interesting to recall, played first base, caught, and performed at second and short, as well as cavorted in the outfield for Holy Apostles, and he played well in all positions. The fact that he was a left-hand thrower wasn't considered a handicap in those days.

The offenders in the field were John Kelly, deceased, Joe Hogan, Tommy Curvin, Love, Shaughnessy, Ed Burke, now a mail carrier, and Moran, all of whom missed up two chances of batted balls. Luke Norton, Boland, Major, Jack Spits, and Gallagher, had no error each. The press account reads in part: "At times each team played rather loosely, the Immaculates being the chief offenders, but easily outclassed their opponents in base running. Holy Apostles seemed afraid to take chances."

Catholic League Indoor Tossers Start 2nd Half

The St. Andrews band of indoor tossers received a severe shock on last Sunday morning, when, with Tony Ferrari on the mound, and girding at the loins for a winning start in the second half of the Catholic Indoor League, they went down to unexpected defeat at the hands of Our Lady of Sorrows. The champions bit the dust to the tune of 3 to 1 because Joe Cordaro meted out but four scattered hits to them, while Ferrari, heretofore undefeated in the league competition, was clucked for six. These half dozen blows summed for three runs, two more than the champs were able to send over the rubber. Marky Chafel, who sometimes bowls in the winter, proved the handy man with the stick for the winners.

St. Boniface began auspiciously with a 5 to 4 win over St. Monica's. This game showed us a Frank Merrill finish. With the score tied at four all, Pitcher Paprocki, of St. Boniface, stepped up in the ninth and whaled one of Deprez's offerings to the tall timbers to bring home victory for the Gregory Street aggregation.

Lefty Schlafel found Holy Redeemer tough pickings and his St. Augustine outfit wilted before the slants of Cubica. Holy Redeemer had one big inning, the fifth, during which they pushed over five runs, which was big enough margin to win. The final was 9 to 2.

With two favorites, St. Andrews and Holy Family, defeated the first time out, it appears that the league has strengthened, which means a tighter race and more interesting games this half. The defeat of St. Andrews was unlooked for. The Portland Avenue lads had won the first half championship quite easily.

Score by Innings of last week's games: St. Andrews 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0—1 4 1; O. L. O. Three Girls Complete Grammar Course At Holy Angels Home

The annual June entertainment, marking the close of the school year, was held at Holy Angels Home, Winton Road North, on Friday, June 30. A capacity audience of relatives and friends of the girls enthusiastically greeted their efforts to entertain and all agreed that this entertainment was the best yet.

The chorus numbers revealed not only many pleasant voices but also a natural ability and a real joy in the singing. There were dances, an operetta and a shadow play, besides the usual recitations on the program. The closing number was a dramatic episode in one act, in which the participants created, in a real fashion, an atmosphere of mystery and romance.

Three of the girls finished the required work of the eighth grade and will receive the State Regents Diplomas. The others completed the work of their respective elementary grades and of the commercial department and will take up new work in the Fall.

Holy Angels Home is an institution, located on Winton Road North and conducted by the Sisters of the Good Shepherd. It is a boarding school and intended for girls who need or will benefit by the training, given in the institution, to prepare them for the responsibilities of life in the community.

It is strictly a training school and not a detention home for the more serious moral delinquents. A thorough study of each girl is made in co-operation with the Child Study Department of the S. P. C. C. and treatment is on an individual basis in the light of the findings of such study.

Parochial Baseball League

Well, it's all over! O.L.P.H. beat Sacred Heart by a score of 10-3. We salute our new Champions! We congratulate the boys, their priests, and the whole parish on their ability not only to play ball but to be team sports men.

It was a decisive game O.L.P.H. shelled hits all over the diamond to prove that there was no doubt about their being the Champs. Their team functioned like a well oiled machine. One impression everyone carried away was the smooth power with which they worked like a twelve cylinder car. They certainly have a sweet team.

When Billy Heim walked to the bat in the first inning he was presented with the Home Run Trophy donated by the Rev. Joseph Vogt. He took the Trophy modestly and handed it to a team mate to hold for him. Herron pitched a ball to him and he promptly drove it over the left fielder's head for a Home Run. Just to prove that he was not fooling two innings later he drove out another over the centerfielder's head. A voice floated over from the Sacred Heart rooters, "That's enough, Billy! We are convinced!"

The mystery was what happened to the Sacred Heart team. Herron seemed to have lost his magic and the infield seemed to be all thumbs. Ryan could not seem to locate the bases and the outfield were uncertain. It was just an off-day and the tragedy was that it came at such an important time. It reminded us of the St. John's team two years ago in the finals. Everything went wrong.

But—once in the finals, and once in the semi-finals and in three years is not a bad record for Sacred Heart. No other school has equaled that record.

A big crowd attended the game and the enthusiasm was intense. The Joseph Avenue contingent gave hearty support to their team as they have done all through the season.

After the game the President of the League presented the Pennant to Magr. Shellhorn who was an enthusiastic spectator of the game. He accepted in behalf of his team. Then what meant more to the boys—applications were given to the team for that week at Camp Stella Maris. Oh, boy! what cheers and whoops!

Many priests were present at the game—their interest in their boys—in the League bringing them there. Fathers Hudson, Lambert, Joseph Vogt, Randall, Newcomb, Ryan, Azizi, Walz, O'Beirne, Msgr. Burns, O'Cleary, George Vogt, Casey, Mahoney, Waterstrat, Bisky, Eugene Goldberg, T. Brennan, Kelly and Maloney, were interested spectators.

Welcome to Camp, O.L.P.H.! We know that you will have a good time. You owe your victory to your own ability to play and your ability to take orders and obey your coach and your priests; also to the generosity and support of your parishioners. And remember that the greatest lesson sports can teach you is to be fair and honest with your opponents and to play unselfishly with your teammates. It is the teams that plays and the team that wins. This is the case with the Champions of this year. All season they have played together for the team and the parish, and they have been fair and square with their opponents. They deserve to win.
