False Feminism Held Contributing To Unemployment

Secular feminism, which has made nasculinity the ideal for women, has contributed more than perhaps any other single factor to unemployment, the Rev. Francis P. Johns, professor of dogma at Our Lady of the Lake Seminary, said in an address delivered recently at the quarterly luncheon meeting of the Diocessa Countries of Catalla Money in Challand cil of Catholic Women in Cleveland "This year," said Dr. John, "the movement of the so-called a social emancipation of women celebrates its centenary. The whole affair began in our America just one hundred years ago. It has now become a rushing torrent in which all women are borne along in spite of them-selves. The rise of women has revolutionized modern society.

"Ownership and rulership are con-nected. Nearly half of our national wealth is controlled by women, add to this women's wages and women's 3.
