NATIONAL PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

During these weeks when our thoughts are so completely filled with plans for the National Convention and the assembling of the year's accomplishments throughout the far-flung reaches of the country, it is constantly being brought to us that in the program of the lay apostolate we face an increasing need of leadership among women.

The work needs women, brave in ; their willingness to undertake the difficult, courageous in their wholehearted consent to overlook the irrilation and the worry which may chance to accompany our human relationships, and gallant in their complete devotion to the cause.

The work needs women who know and understand the meaning of their faith, who by serious study and humility of effort have learned to feel that faith so deeply that they are able to share its beauty and strength with those about them. It needs women of intelligence, who talents, a purpose to which their efproblems of family life, industry, edge of Divine Things."

The work needs women generous the spirit of the Apostles, because the results are not material: they are interior, eternal, and so far reaching as to be impossible of neasurement.
