Causes of Crime "The building up of our great industrial system has militated against the preservation of the Christian home in many ways but, particularly, in that it has militated against that ome-ownership which gives a sense of security to the family, supplies opportunity for occupation during leisure time and a center for family life and recreation at all times. How can we hope for that type of family life which will furnish training for the citizens of the future in the limits of s tenement or a boarding house in one of our great cities. Without hesitation, he answered: To my mind, three things are absolutely essential, definite religious training for our children, recognition of authority, first in the home and in the school, building more homes and

He concluded by saying: "On next Sunday a message of the Holy Father and the Bishops of the United States in regard to the Catholic University of America will be broadcast from 8,400 pulpits. To fill the vacancy left by those missing homes and to make possible repair and modernization of those homes which should be renovated if we are to maintain standards for decent living will mean expenditure of huge sums on the part of our Government, but it will mean work also to thousands of the unemployed, improving the conditions and restoring the self-respect of thousands of families.
