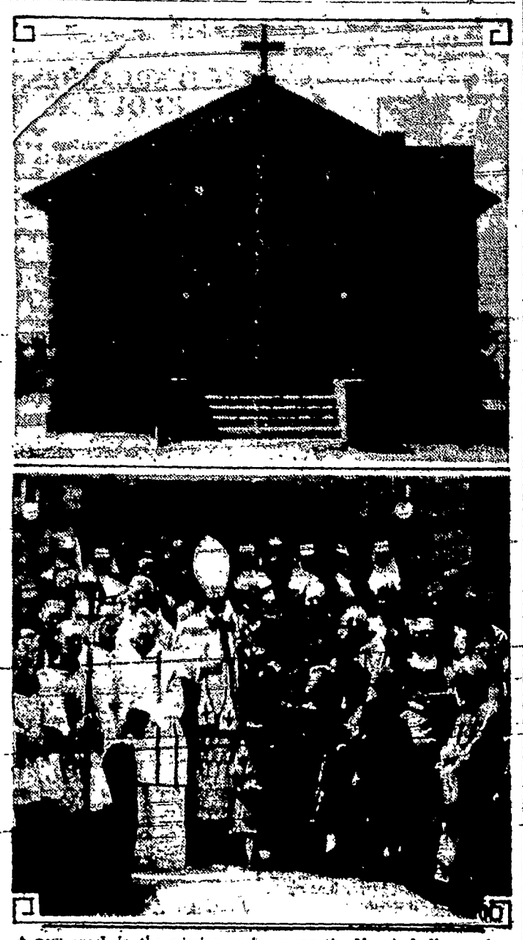
Churches Built for Indians



A new epoch in the mission work among the Navajo Indians, who have the largest Indian Reservation in the United States, was marked with the dedication of two new churches at Naschitt and Shiprock, New Mexico, built through the assistance of the Marquette League. The photos show the Church of Christ the King, at Shiprock, and the Most Rev. Rudolph A. Gerken, Archbishop of Santa Fe, with a group of his beloved Indians, Franciscan clergy and Sisters who participated in the ceremonies.

TWO INDIAN CHURCHES ARE DEDICATED

Santa Fe, N Mex (NCWC) - What may easily mark the beginning of a new epoch in the mission work among the Navajo Indians was the dedication of two new churches by the Most Rev Rudolph A Gerken, Archbishop of Santa Fe The churches were built with the assistance of the Marquette League, which donated $3,000 for the new church at Naschitt, and $5,000 for the church at Shiprock.

The church at Naschitt was dedicated with Mass celebrated by the Rev. Arnold Heinzmann, O. F. M., coram Episcopo The Archbishop preached the sermon with the aid of an interpreter

After the dedicatory ceremonies the Archbishop, together with six priests, two Sistors of the Blessed Sacrament from St Michael's Arizona, and two Franciscan Sisters, Missionaries of Mary from Holy Angels Convent, St. Michael's Arizona, joined the Indians in their picnic dinner consisting of barbecued mutton, beans, and Indian bread or doughnuts. All spent the afternoon in the vicinity of the church to witness the games and Indian sports which formed a part of the great Feast Day Horse races and foot races were participated in by the squaws and young women as well as by the men

The party then drove with the Archbishop 60 miles north through the desert to Shiprock, where a commodious and substantial rock church was dedicated to Christ the King. The church at Naschitt was dedicated to St Anthony

Preaches in English

The Archbishop dedicated the church at Shiprock amid great solemnity with 18 priests, 10 Sisters, and two Brothers present. After the dedication, the Archbishop celebrated a Solemn Pontifical Mass and preached a sermon in English The Rev. Marcellus Troester, O.F.M., preached in the Navajo language. The music of the Mass was sung by local talent of both Catholics and non-Catholics employed by the Government at the schools and Indian agencies.

After the services, all the clergy, Sisters, and visitors 100 in number were tendered a dinner at the Government Employees Clubhouse, while the Navajo Indians enjoyed another barbecue picnic dinner

The Rt. Rev Msgr William J Flynn, director general of the Marquette League in New York, made several trips through the Navajo region and succeeded in finding two benefactors who donated the essential means for completing the two new churches.

TELLS TRUTH ABOUT OFFER MADE DIONNES

the children to Chicago. We wanted them to remain in Corbeil, but we wanted to do our utmost to save their lives and here was our position

Mr. Dionne was poor. I was poor, and nevertheless I had become guarantee for the salary of the nurses The reeve of the municipality had told me he could not do much. The Prime Minister of Canada, learning of the birth, had answered: "I have nothing to say." The Prime Minister of Ontario, Mr Henry, had sent $25 to the quintuplets Still, we wanted to be able to give the children the utmost care and at the same time not be engaged in too much of a big financial responsibility should they die after a few weeks. Do not forget that it was only the fourth day after the birth and we could not guess how magnificent was to be the help offered from all parts of Canada and the United States.

Sought Government's Aid

I told Mr Dionne "We need the help of the government and the surest way to have it is to let them know the pressure made on you by United States interests" So we decided to accept the proposition But before discussing, we asked the promoters "Should we sign any agreement today, and is it your intention to force us to follow it?"

"No, not against your will," was the answer

So we wrote the agreement, and for more precaution, I myself wrote the first paragraph "Agreement between Oliva Dionne and his wife Elzire Legros on the one part and the Century of Progress Tour Bureau of Chicago on the other part," making absolutely sure that the agreement would be valid and binding only when signed by the mother, Elzire Legros.

When they agreed with the proposition, the promoters wanted me to accompany Mr. and Mrs. Dionne should they go to Chicago. I said "No I cannot afford it. I am poor and I cannot leave my parish."

"But we will pay you," was the answer. And after a little discussion we agreed that besides $250 a week, the promoters would give Mr. Dionne, off the balance, when expenses paid, 23 per cent instead of 20 per cent, firstly offered, and I would get seven per cent, should I go as personal manager of Mr. Dionne.

Voiding of Agreement

Such is the agreement that I advised Mr Dionne to sign in order to force the government to step in and help us.

On our way back to Corbeil from Orillia, I told Mr. Dionne: "If you worry about the agreement that you have signed, burn it when back at home because it is absolutely no good." The next morning, I sent a telegram to the promoters: "Do not go any further with the agreement because we will not go to Chicago," and in the same afternoon, I had my attorney, Mr. Valin, from North Bay, send them a legal advise that the agreement was regarded as null and void.

force standards of health, wages, or hours;

"2. That the Government ought to make such arrangements and use its influence to bring about arrangements which will make possible peaceful settlements of controversies and relieve labor of the necessity of resorting to strikes in order to secure equitable conditions and the right to be heard;

"3. That the ideal government should be through legislation and through co-operation between employers and workers to make every job the best that the human mind can devise as to physical conditions and the right to be heard;

Government Should Encourage

"4. That government should encourage such organization and development of wage earners as will give status and stability to labor as a recognized important group of citizens having a contribution to make to economic and political thought and to the cultural life of the community;

"5. That government ought to arrange that labor play its part in the study and development of any economic policies for the future of the United States; and,

"6. That the Government should encourage mutuality between labor and employers in the improvement of production and in the development in both groups of a philosophy of self-government in the public interest. If labor's rights are defined by law and by government, then certain obligations will, of course, be expected of wage earners, and it is for the public interest that those obligations should be defined by labor itself and that such discipline as is necessary should be self-imposed and not imposed from without. This is the basis of all professional codes of ethics in modern society."

A Story Corner For Children

By 'Cousin Ken'

THE TEST OF BRAVERY

THERE is a little story told about a farmer's son, who came running in to his father crying "Father! you know that nervous boy Robin who goes to our school?"

"Yes," said his father, "you have often told me how fearful of things he appears to be, that other boys don't worry over."

"And so he is!" cried the son, "and you should have seen him just now as I did! Talk about the shivery-shakes! Oh, my!"

"Why, what was the cause of it?" asked the farmer.

"Well," said his son with a chuckle, "Robin and his sister were crossing our field where the young bull is, and lo and behold ye, what should the bull do but give a roar and make for them like a runaway fire engine! Oho! poor Robin, he was a sight to see!"

"And what did you do?"

"Oh, I'm brave, I am I'm not frightened of bulls! I soon picked up a stick and drove the brute off! That's the benefit of being brave, isn't it, Father! I thought nothing of it, just drove it off with my stick—it was only a joke to me."

"And very creditable of you, too," said the farmer warmly, "no doubt you saved Robin from a severe accident."

"Yes," said his son, very pleased with himself, "it's nice to think I'm braver than Robin."

"But you are not," said his father.

"Not?" exclaimed the boy.

"No, what merit is there in doing something you are not afraid to do? True, it was splendid of you to save Robin, but of the two, he was the brave one."

"But he was struck with fear, and just stood there!"

"Yes, to attract the bull's attention while his sister escaped. Although he was frightened to death of the danger, you see, which is more brave than facing the danger easily because he didn't fear it. In saving Robin, you did but what you enjoyed doing, but if he knew (and others like him too) that he was a brave boy doing your duty, (for it is the highest form of bravery, he would take)."

Converted at Lourdes, Woman Returns Every Year to Offer Thanks

Chicago — (NCWC) — Mrs. John May, member of a socially prominent Chicago family who is a convert to the faith, is preparing to return to Lourdes, France, the scene of her conversion. It will be the fifth time Mrs. May has made the trip, the fourth time as a Catholic.

"I make this trip gladly every year," said Mrs. May a few days ago in addressing a group of Catholic club women here, "as after my services as I did that summer five years ago as a [illegible] in the waters at the famous shrine. Although my health was good it seems even better at Lourdes and the most strenuous duties are truly a work of love."

Mrs. May does not hesitate to say that her first visit to Lourdes was little more than that of an interested visitor. "But I was touched and edified when I saw crowds of people of high birth, those of great humble circumstances, all engaged in the same kind of work, all because of their great love for Our Blessed Lady," she added. "Each year I look forward to my return to Lourdes as an act of thanksgiving."

Why were most wealthy? If we shall see to be the greatest benefactors of mankind.
