

TWO RELIGIOUS GROUPS ASSAILED AT HUMAN RELATIONS INSTITUTE

(Continued from Page 1) erant attitude of the Government there. After a few words from Dr. MacFarland, the session was at an end but Mr. Baker announced that it would be continued at a special meeting in the afternoon.

At this session Mr. Williams opened with a statement of the Catholic position, declaring that the situation in Mexico, as it was portrayed in Mr. Beteta's speech, was obviously a part of the worldwide attack on God himself, and as such worthy of the most serious consideration of those present, most of whom were representatives of one or other religious group. He also dwelt on the character of the so-called "reformers" in Mexico.

POPE CALLS FOR PRAYERS TO AVERT WAR

(Continued from Page One) duty of those far-seeing men who understand the exigencies of the real happiness of people and of social justice—those men who do everything possible, not by means of threats, which cannot but aggravate the situation by irritating spirits; not by temporizing, through which precious time is lost, but with truly humane intention and by the utmost exertion of efforts to advance the work of pacification with the aim of preventing war. We pray that God will bless this activity. We ask you to pray with us.

Pope Pius began his discourse to the nurses by responding to an address of homage read by the Rev. Edward P. Garacha, S.J., Spiritual Director of the International Federation of Catholic Nurses, whom he publicly congratulated on the cooperation so efficacious and beneficial to the Congress.

The Holy Father fully approved the program of the Congress, emphasizing these three points: First, that Catholic nurses must oppose modern materialism and paganism, which is no longer merely a menace but in many cases has already brought serious ruin. Against these forces Catholic nurses must bring the highest Christian spirituality, instilling it in themselves to transmit to others. It is necessary that Catholic nurses know well all that they can do according to Christian morality, which they cannot do, and what they must do with some precautions. This is the moral side of their work, to which Catholic nurses must bring all their attention. Catholic nurses must acquire all possible professional training, and must exhibit the highest possible scholarship.
