Aquinas To Give Passion Play By Drama Teacher

"The Dramatic Club of the Aquinas Institute, endeavoring to keep step with the educational growth of the school, is proud to announce a broader use of its facilities in the interest of education and Catholic Action," says the Maroon and White, school paper, in its issue this week. "A Religious Drama based on the Passion and written by Edwin Dolan, the school Director of Dramatics, so as to be particularly adaptable to the ability and talent of Aquinas students, yet meeting the needs of the Catholic people of Rochester, will this year be added to its two regular presentations.

"While other cities have for long enjoyed the annual spectacle of the Lenten drama, Rochester has had to contend itself with but occasional productions of dubious merit. Other dioceses have established Lenten Plays which have been repeated year after year and have been adopted as their very own. Catholic Action demands a Catholic stage and the Religious drama should go far toward satisfying the demand.

"The Dramatic Club of the Aquinas Institute, being blessed with an adequate stage, spacious auditorium and a large and active membership, feels itself to be well qualified to enter upon this important work. The religious and educational values inherent in the portrayal of a Religious Drama are by their very nature a part of a Catholic school.

"The Lenten Play has been tentatively entitled, As It Was In The Beginning. It will be presented annually on Passion Sunday, Palm Sunday and on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of Holy Week. The faculty and student body sincerely hope that the Catholic population of Rochester will make the most of this opportunity to foster Catholic action through the Catholic Drama.

"That Mr. Dolan directs the Aquinas productions is in large measure responsible for the record audiences which are attracted to Aquinas presentations. Now that he is preparing to direct a play which he himself has written we hope that the number of performances will even exceed the five for which we are planning."

Catholic Charities of Elmira Report Made as Directors Meet

Cornelius O'Dea Again Named Head, Mrs. Edward J. Dunn, Vice-chairman; Executive Director Outlines Social Problems Faced

Elmira—A report of the work being accomplished and of the problems being met here by the Catholic Charities was submitted last Wednesday at the office of the organization director's meeting held in the Keeney Building.

Officers named were: President, the Most Rev. Edward Mooney, Bishop of Rochester; Vice Presidents, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John J. Lee, V. F. and the Rev William J. Brion; Chairman, Cornelius O'Dea, Vice Chairman, Mrs. Edward J. Dunn; Treasurer, William Flannery; Secretary, Martin T. Purtell.

The Rev. Walter A. Foery of Rochester, diocesan director of Catholic Charities, represented Archbishop Mooney at the meeting.

Miss FitzGerald Reports

Miss Mary E. FitzGerald, executive director of the organization, submitted the report covering a period dating back to September, 1933, when the major part of the relief responsibility for families under the care of the organization at that time was transferred to the Public Welfare Department.

"As a result of this transfer, we were able to return Catholic Charities to the original policy and program of service for social and spiritual rehabilitation of families," Miss FitzGerald reported.

"At present 220 families are being given assistance. A few are receiving material relief, and the remainder are financially independent or are receiving help from the public welfare department.

"These families present a multiplicity of social problems which would slowly but surely wreck their home life. The visitor must use time and skill over a long period if these situations are adjusted.

Many Problems

"We must realize that material relief cannot solve every problem. Enforced idleness weakens industrious habits of men, young children show effects of the prolonged depression, health problems are often complicated with emotional difficulties, the doubling up of families in the same living quarters often has disastrous social results.

"It is with these and similar situations that Catholic Charities concerns itself in the hope of holding families intact and restoring them to a rightful place in the community.

"We are not losing sight of our limitations and we realize that it is not only by a close working relationship between public and private agencies that families can be helped to become assets rather than liabilities to the community. We are, therefore, most grateful for the splendid cooperative plan which exists between the agencies in Elmira at the present time.

Furnish Strength

"Family Case Work, so called because we lack a more elucidative term, is hard to explain. We who have resources within ourselves or among our friends that enable us to meet and conquer our problems find it difficult to understand the devastating effects of these same disasters when they come to 'the others' who do not possess these inner strengths.

"The visitor from the Private Family Agency sees every man as different from his neighbor. She knows herself, her friends and her clients as people striving against weakness to catch a glimpse of happiness and peaceful living. She stands on this common ground with her families, fanning flagging courage, sympathetically understanding individuals and wisely guiding them back to security and contentment."
