Dear Ellen Leary

This world between is the subject of Annette's letter. Dear Ellen Leary: A colored gentleman sat in front of me at Mass last Sunday morning. There was something so revealing about the way he fingered his rosary. For the first time in my life I felt a personal interest in this negro question.

do they try to hire a colored woman as a domestic for less pay, if possible?

I am mindful of the story of the treatment of a colored YWCA secretary by some of her white co-workers. A few years ago I was present at a convention where the colored girl's appearance at the first dinner she was requested to attend was the subject of some secretarial conversation. The one who was not written in the book of the YWCA is merely an illustration of the general unchristian attitude of educated women for a colored person even one who is their mental equal. What can you do about it? Channing wrote "Every human being has his work to do on this earth. It is his duty to perform it, and he needs to exert which are necessary to the life and which no conscience can ignore."
