Crying In The Dark

We stood on mountain peaks, we gazed high, and smiled and spoke, and waved a hand as loved ones do, and something sleeping woke...

This ugly weather divorce! An average year has 100,000 divorces in United States. 100,000 solemn vows to God a year repudiated by tongues of Christian men and women...

Being Catholic is enough reason for existing to me, nothing of "sticking together" in marriage, whether or not that existence chokes us, stifles us, or thwarts us at every turn...

One quarrel or years of them don't lessen the bond of marriage. It is the bond of love that binds us together, and it is this bond that makes marriage a partnership of joy and peace...

Today's man brought me a letter from Hazel telling me of the divorce of an acquaintance of mine. "Jeffrey landed into the headlines getting a divorce. He charged around our rendezvous with death, marital superiority, and humiliating him!"

What a crop of cowards will be found in the harvest of this generation's souls! Fight in a drunken brawl, fight with a machine gun to protect cowardly hides, fight for an audience reason on land, sea or sky...

For your friends, I suggest that they read this book on marriage by Blakewell Morrison, S. J., S. M. Or that they ponder over the beautiful meaning of marriage happiness in the apostolic "Casti Connubii" of Pope Pius XI.

Do you know that one may sit the sofa by window? If you are doing your work, such as reading or sewing, look off by a distant point every now and then. Roll your eyes and blink them. Look down then up, then to each side of the room without turning your head. Occasionally cover your eyes with your cupped palms so as to shut out all the light, and look at black ink for a few minutes. You will find it will help.
