CLOCKS IN STEEPLES

By VINCENT DePAUL FITZPATRICK

We wish we lived across the street from a tall steeple with a clock in it.

That is a peculiar wish, isn't it? But then from boyhood we have liked steeples with clocks in them, especially when the clocks are alight at night and looking down at the streets below.

We have a penchant for lights—lights gleaming from the skyscrapers in New York and other cities; candles gleaming through the windows of private homes; lights strung along the water with their faint shimmering here and there on the dark waters. Such things turn us to thoughts of Christmas, especially in the autumnal time and the nights of December.

If ever we go back to London we shall go to a certain hotel and ask for the room from which we looked down on the cheerful clock which stands above one of the gates of Buckingham Palace.

That clock and we became friends. As we sat looking at it our thoughts went back to some scenes of the past.

We saw many church steeples in London with clocks in them. We did not see many steeples with clocks in them in France, Germany, Belgium and other European countries.

Have you ever watched a baby looking up at the stars which, we were told, when we were infants, the angels put out every night to light the world?

Light! That is the synonym and the symbol of the Catholic Church. Indeed it is The Catholic Church. Light means Truth. It means Happiness. It means Hope and it means Achievement.

The candles are lighted at the Sacrifice of the Mass to greet the Light which comes down from Heaven on the altar as He was born in Bethlehem.

Time had been so long to them but now and forever more. Time would be so short. They knew that all they sought was in the Light.
