BIRTH CONTROL ISSUE SHOWS NEED FOR ALERT PRESS

Collecting Postage Stamps A Fascinating Informative Hobby

Very interesting for girls and boys, and a recreation that can be carried through the adult years.

Scranton's are devoting a large section of their Taylor Building Store to collectors' supplies and stamps.

Scores of Stamp Albums are on display, ranging from junior albums for young beginners, selling at 25c, to the large three-volume Scott which is the most complete published.

Here are special magnifying glasses for examination, detectors, scales, and the approved hinges.

The latest editions of the authoritative stamp catalogs and many books on stamps and stamp collecting.

Inexpensive packets of stamps for those beginning to build up albums, and the rarer stamps to complete the collections, from Scott, Honor-Blt, PhHatelic-Bat, and other noted houses, together with a large, constantly-changing collection from an experienced collector who buys private collections and rare stamps for Scrantom's.

Baby Depression

By CHARLES A. TUCKER

"To talk of race suicide with 10,000,000 unemployed is ridiculous," so says the Arch-Priestess of the Birth Controllers, Mrs. Thomas N Hepburn.

"Births have decreased more than 20% during the last 10 years" - so speaks Dr. O. E. Baker, Senior Agricultural Economist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Mrs. Hepburn as "one of our better people, you know" would give the privilege of having children to the privileged. But to the "underprivileged" as she so tenderly calls them, the door to Babyland is closed. "The maternal instinct is the strongest instinct of the race," she touchingly remarks but to the women "on relief" babies would be a burden on the taxpayers.

Race suicide? Ridiculous! Well, New England cemeteries are a mute testimony to the effectiveness of Birth Control. Names that once held their hand on the throttle of American life are now but chiselled inscriptions on scarred monuments, as extinct as the Dinosaur. Race suicide has marked its victims for extinction, and, strangely, effaces from the worldly scene the names of its most devoted zealots.

"The next few decades," says Dr Baker, "are years of grace for the American people. The people of the Nation must see clearly the cause and consequences of the declining birth rate and resolutely set about to prevent them." "In 1930, according to the Census, the number of children in the cities of over 100,000 population lacked about 22 percent of being sufficient to maintain the population of these cities permanently stationary."

A lecture under the roof of the Chamber of Commerce should have some interest to business men. A well-known Economic Service has stated that a 20% increase in purchasing power would put the nation back to work. Purchasing power is based on consumers. The children of today are the consumers of tomorrow.

In this connection Dr. Baker points out "By 1940 there will be about 200,000 fewer children 14 years of age than in 1935, and by 1950 fully 600,000 fewer." With this decline Mrs Hepburn wishes there were 250,000 birth control clinics instead of the 250 already established.

Dr. Baker continues by prophesying "Looking further into the future I am inclined to the view that declining population will tend to increase unemployment. Vacant houses, vacant store-room, idle factories, abandoned farms will tend to lower rents and interest returns and thereby temporarily lower the cost of living, but the lessened return to capital is likely to depress gradually the spirit of enterprise and may well lead to increasing dependence upon the government. The decreasing number of children probably will diminish the incentive of saving."

"Any economic system which prevents the reproduction of the race will pass away."

"No nation can suffer such a decrease in births to continue as that during the last decade and not suffer the decline in strength that accompanies a rapid aging of the population." And again Dr Baker: "The depression is in no small measure the consequence of moral failure. Unless there is a spiritual awakening of the American people they will lack the will to survive."

Clean wholesome Christian families with proud young mothers and fathers are facing the future courageously. They want no doddering advice from professional meddlers. They refuse to admit they are so essentially bestial that self-control can never be a factor of their lives and they must rely on the potency of mechanical or chemical aids to live a normal life. They disdain the implication that they have no right to have children because a warped economic order has blighted their financial outlook for the present.

They look on the faces of bright youngsters and hear the encouraging words of the one Master Whose opinion makes any difference at all in their lives "Suffer the little children to come unto Me for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

"At that time, Jesus said to his disciples: Beware of false prophets who come to you in the clothing of sheep, but inwardly they are ravening wolves by their fruits you shall know them." (Matt. VII. 15).

PLAN DRIVE FOR COURIER CIRCULATION

With the birth control issue blazing across the headlines interest again focused on the vital need of a Catholic press in Rochester.

The arguments advanced by the Birth Control advocates could not be refuted without a vigilant Catholic press. It is a prime necessity in times like these.

To further the cause of the Catholic press in the Rochester diocese the CATHOLIC COURIER official diocesan organ, is completing plans for a diocesan-wide circulation campaign destined to make your official paper more potent than ever before.

Never has the need of a strong virile Catholic press been more vital. Question after question finds its way into the secular press and all call for a sincere Catholic interpretation.

Only in your official diocesan weekly can you hope to obtain a proper and satisfactory exposition of these important issues.

The next two issues of the Catholic Courier will bring important and profitable news concerning the circulation campaign. It is well worth your while to read every one.

February Catholic press month is only a fortnight away. Keep close watch of these columns.
