IN DEFENSE OF THE IRISH

Dear Mrs. Madigan: In reference to that charming letter which you received and which appeared in the column recently, may I as an Irish Catholic girl beg a little space in your column to try, in my own poor way, to answer and reply.

"First, my friend is very troubled because she thinks you are not an American lady. I have been in this country but a short time so do not know much about American history, but I always thought the Indians were the real Americans, every other American trying their best to copy them."

"Second it seems the only Irish people our friend has come in contact with have been jealous and quarrelsome. Well, God be praised that we have not worse faults but we Irish have a lot to be proud about."
