'In Music Land' REVIEW OF NEW BOOK FOR TEACHING OF MUSIC

From the Harmonium Publishing Company this week has come the best book of the year. The Rhythm Series' This book, entitled 'In Music Land' is the work of the ever-inspiring and ingenious mind of Mother G. Stevens, R. C. J., director of the Holy X School of Liturgical Music, College of the Sacred Heart, New York City. Mother Stevens is well known to Rochester musicians, and especially to those who teach in the schools. Her book has been awarded with the highest praise. Now that we have reviewed it we can safely say that it will receive a hearty welcome and approval from teachers and pupils. Its attractiveness is the result of careful and ideal organization of size and structure. It is dedicated to children and arranged so they would receive and love it. It is a delightful and interesting book of the year. Each page is a masterpiece of art and music. It is a book which will hold the attention and arouse the interest of the child. It is a book which will be used in the classroom with excellent success. It follows Mother Stevens' famous method of presentation, bringing in the vocal, instrumental and rhythmic material in such a delightful and yet strictly pedagogical way, as to make it a real asset in a classroom. 'In Music Land' will make its users become appreciative of all that is beautiful and ideal in the realm of artistic music. The child is taught to learn to sing and hear beautiful tunes and rhythms and even to create his own compositions according to correct art forms. Since the schools of the diocese of Rochester follow the method outlined in this book, it promises to be a welcome aid in facilitating the teaching of singing. It will certainly aid in stimulating an increased interest in the subject of music in schools. We congratulate the author on her first book, 'In Music Land' and look forward to her second and third books which are promised at an early date. L. C. Musters

ANOTHER REASON

Cardinal Gibbons liked and often told the following story. One day an English nobleman was suddenly discovered by the lordship. 'Well, Pat, what are you doing here?' 'What brings you out so early this morning?' 'After a moment's hesitation, Pat said: 'My lord, may I ask you a question?' 'Certainly, Pat. What is it?' 'It's the same question as your own, My lord. What brings you out so early this morning?' 'Why, Pat, I'm out to get an appetite for my breakfast.' 'My lord,' replied Pat, 'I'm out to get a breakfast for my appetite.'

FREQUENT CONFESSION

As God's grace is the means of our happiness, man, by an act of will, can be really happy without it. It follows that frequent Confession is the chief means of becoming and remaining happy. As St. Ignace of Loyola, Holy Communion is more than anything else, teaches us and helps us to God. Although frequent Confession is useful and so necessary to our advancement, it is strangely enough neglected by a great many, and even the fairly good are lukewarm in their practice. This can be accounted for by the fact that St. Ignace, knowing its very usefulness and necessity to us, does everything in his power to keep us from it.

Girls Lost Four Days On Moors Saved After Praying to St. Anthony

London (AP) - Three girl pupils who were lost for four days and nights on the bleak North Shires-moors attribute their rescue to St. Anthony of Padua, Patron of the lost. An airplane and a search party on foot sought them in vain, and they came near to complete exhaustion from exposure and lack of food. One of the three, a Catholic, Miss Pauline Preston, suggested prayers to St. Anthony, and her two non-Catholic companions and them with her. A second search party found the girls when they could hardly move.
