British Archbishop Dedicates Life To Building Schools

By GEORGE BARNARD
London, England (Catholic) — In his diocese disclosed by an inquiry to be in non-Catholic schools, is the task which the Most Rev. A. Hinsley, the Archbishop of Westminster, will devote the remaining years of his life.

"Not only is the matter important to us, but it is a matter of national importance," said the Archbishop in a speech at the opening of the 19,000-Catholic children in his diocese disclosed by an inquiry to be in non-Catholic schools, is the task which the Most Rev. A. Hinsley, the Archbishop of Westminster, will devote the remaining years of his life.

Archbishop Hinsley has launched an appeal for $500,000 to build new schools, and to extend others. As soon as possible the parish in which the school is built will take over the responsibility for the interest and the repayment of the capital.

Archbishop Hinsley discloses that there are 60 parishes in his diocese which have no Catholic schools. He says that reports from parish priests show that few children who do not attend Catholic schools can be induced to attend Sunday classes in religion.

"It would therefore seem a fact and not a question of opinion," he says, "that many thousands of children who do not attend our schools are deprived of all proper training in the life-giving truths of our faith. Such a loss cannot be deemed anything but calamitous. In deed and truth it often proves irreparable."

"One may differ mildly or violently from the President's views," says a Christian, "but hardly dispute his Christian approach to the solution of problems as indicated by his request for prayers for guidance." — (Catholic Universe Bulletin)

A Story Corner For Children

THE LEGEND OF THE EASTER BIRD

You remember the beautiful Easter legend of how the Robin got his red-breast through lighting on Our Lord's head as He hung on the Cross. To check this legend, which is a very old one, the Robin in draw out the Thorn a drop of the Sacred Blood splashed on the bird's breast. And then you recall that the Robin flew back to the bird carrying the thorn, to tell them of what had done, and to show them his red breast.

There is another legend based on the Robin's return to his friends that Easter-time, and here it is: The Bullfinch, the Goldfinch and the Chaffinch flew forward to have the Robin's joyful tale of what had happened, and as their comrades brokenly whispered his news the Goldfinch sorrowfully kissed him and so received the Mark of the Thorn on his chest, as you may see to this day, the Goldfinch's chest is marked with a red cross.

The bullfinch pressed against the Robin to comfort him, and his breast became redder and then the Robin's for the stain was drying. And then the Chaffinch embraced the Robin and he too received the Mark, but fainter still, yet it may be seen. And then the birds flew away, one here, one there, to spread the news, and the Robin flew further still, bearing the thorn, to show where he had been. And as he flew, a little nuthatch Sparrow flew over to see what had happened and the Robin told him how he had settled on Our Lord's head, to wither the thorn tree, and how he had been reddened by the drop of blood, and how the Bullfinch, the Chaffinch and the Goldfinch had shared in the honor of the Mark.

Remember Alamo

The Alamo, or Mission San Antonio de Valero, "Cradle of Texas Liberty," where thou and attended the Pontifical Field Mass, March 6, the centenary of its fall, as a tribute to the Texas heroes slain there. The Most Rev. A. J. Dugan, Archbishop of San Antonio, officiated. A view of the Alamo appears on a new U. S. postage stamp, commemorating 100 years of Texas Independence from Mexico.

THE SHOE-SHINE BOY

I like the snap and crackle of the shoe-shine boy. He brushes and he polishes with zip and vim. He starts around the edges of your sole and I feel the bits of polish near your toes. He has a steady hand and the spring of a chair. He has the same look to his face as you see in the eyes of a man who has been through a hard day's work. He has a steady hand and the spring of a chair. He has the same look to his face as you see in the eyes of a man who has been through a hard day's work.

A GUIDE TO THE LITURGICAL YEAR
By The REV. PAUL BISSARD
(Editor, The Leaflet Missal)
A SYMBOL OF VICTORY
The point is, from time immemorial, a symbol of victory. A soldier is often captured holding a branch of palm in his hand. It means that he has been victorious over his enemies and so, completely, that he could die as Christ did on the Cross to His victory.
