Crying In The Dark

By EILEEN LEARY

Must one live East of Sunnyside, N. Y. where there ain't no Ten Commandments? Mary's mind one who lives west of Sunnyside try to forget the Ten Commandments? Mary's letter prompts the questions.

"Dear Eileen Leary: 'Why is it a boy like a certain Joe I know is so interesting?' Joe had a 'college' education. He left college at the end of his second year, he also left his religion. He gets jobs here and there in a factory from Arizona he boasted to me that he had 'made' about all the Ten Commandments and that he was now enjoying alone, one of the seven capital sins. Joe is the most considerate, well-mannered and intelligent boys I ever knew. We have been like brother and sister all our lives. I don't think that he will ever marry. He is 28 now. When I write to him or when he comes home I can't preach to him although I know that I should really like his devil-may-care attitude on life. In comparison, my dull virtuous life seems 'poor company' for anyone. Why is it?"

One doesn't preach to Joe or Josephine either. The present day psychology in training a child is Introducing persons do not last long in memory unless they have some inner firmness to their characters. The inner firmness, the sturdiness, and the character take their toll of those who wanted to drain life to the last drop. Angelo Patri wrote, 'We drain joy to its dregs. We long to know, and feel and exult to the last heart-throb, and then comes the desolation of satiety. Beauty probed to its death, becomes sinister. Life drained to its last drop turns into tragedy.'

The reason, Mary, that a Christian life seems dull in comparison to a pagan life is in part the fault of Christians. Consider our religious vocations where Christian lives are full of adventure and high romance unparalleled in history. Consider the life of the average vocation. Is there not a story there that has not been written there, more playwrights, more actors, more artists, and more poets or for more courageous Christian people during to prove that virtue is the most interesting thing about. Whether virtue's blackboard a bit of a temptation what a card in the sight of God? Mary, what you keep the future of your castle before the eyes of Joe when you write to him or see him. He is intelligent. He will often think about it.

SODAL TALK

Recording the Activities of Rochester Parish Sodality Union

"AS RADICAL AS CHRIST"

Let Christ mean their voices raise. And sing the Paschal Victim's praise. This solemn festival to a Christ, innocent and unspiced, Sonner to God, bath reconded. The Lamb returned to the Father's sheep. In this great triumph death and life Together met in wondrous staff. The Prince of Life, one dead, one living. Sing about that savior, Mary, say. Upon thy soul at break of day 'Christ's glory, as He rose again. 'I saw the tomb where He did lie, 'And angel brightness heard by 'The winding cloth were there to see. 'Christ, my hope is risen and He 'Awakened you in Galilee.' We know that Christ is risen indeed. And victor long before they plead. Have joy, Lord, and clemency. — Anna —
