

CATHOLICS HEAR COMMUNITY CHEST APPEAL

THE CAPITAL LETTER

NCWC News Service

Washington On one point at least President Roosevelt and the business leaders of the country would have been more or less at odds. It is that if something is to be done about unemployment, more must be known about it than is now available, either to government or industry.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States proposed to make a survey to determine just what the unemployment problem is and the President commended the idea heartily.

As it was discussed at the meeting of the business leaders, unemployment was one question but not a question. Statistics estimate the amount of unemployment with widely varying results. Then comes the question: Whether an unemployed man is better off than he is when he is working and can find nothing to do. Whether that in itself is an opportunity offers an opportunity to the unemployed man to do things, such as take a course in a trade, or to go to school, or to go to work.

It is not much doubt that as a result of the underlying legislation passed by the government, more attention will be centered in the future on the training of the unemployed to fit the job.

SEMINARIES' EARLY STRUGGLES RETOLD AS ORDINATIONS NEAR

St. Bernard's Seminary. Recollections of Bishop McQuaid's Founding of Seminaries Reveals Cooperation of Priests and People in Project Now Justified.

Memories of the early days of our diocesan seminaries are treasured in the minds of the older generation. When the purpose of the first Bishop of Rochester, Bernard J. McQuaid, to bring into being in a small and struggling diocese not only a preparatory seminary, but also one in which theology and philosophy would be taught, was first made known, many considered that it would always remain a dream that could not come true.

The first part of the project was carried into effect with the opening of St. Andrew's Preparatory Seminary in 1858. This was the first of the seminaries which were to be founded in the diocese.

Cites Applications of Encyclical Principles to America's Problems

By LENA E. BRISSETTE, Field Secretary, N.C.W.C. Department of Social Action

May 15 is the forty-fifth anniversary of Pope Leo's condition of labor and the fifth anniversary of Pope Pius XI's Reconstructing the Social Order. It is well to take stock of what has been done to think out their teachings make the teachings known and to apply them to the United States.

The first work is that of putting these documents into their American setting through thinking out the relationship to the facts here and working out the theoretical application of the principles to American conditions. A very great deal has been done in this first part of the work and far more than is usually considered.

Father Foery Asks Support In Campaign

Ten Parochial Institutions Received $161,641.57 From Chest In Past Year; 'Be A Good Neighbor' Theme For Drive Starting Monday With Chamber Dinner

An appeal went out to all Catholics of Rochester this week, asking their support in the Community Chest campaign which opens Monday and continues through to May 18.

The Rev. Walter A. Foery, director of Catholic Charities, declared that the Community Chest campaign gives Catholics their opportunity of making a contribution to the Catholic charitable activities of Rochester.

Be A Good Neighbor Community Chest headquarters reported the organization of teams was being perfected this week. Many prominent members of the Catholic laity are listed as campaign leaders and workers.

The slogan "Be A Good Neighbor" has been selected as the 1936 Community Chest theme. Ten Catholic institutions participate in Community Chest funds. During the past year these institutions received a total of $161,641.57 from the chest.

Chest Functions Explained Describing the functioning of the Community Chest, Father Foery explained:

It is well to be reminded that the chest is a corporate body, created by the citizens of Rochester, belongs to them and that its directors, officers and managers are servants of those who make up the great body of its financial support and of the member agencies.

The machinery of the Chest is of our making, and of those who, with us, maintain it and keep it at work. The two major factors in any central financing scheme are its beneficiaries and its supporters, the official body being only the medium through and by which the interests of both are fostered and served.

New Budgets Presented Father Foery then pointed out that the participating Catholic agencies have presented their annual statements and budgets for the year beginning April 1, 1936, along with those of other participants to the Community Chest board of directors. He explained:

"Upon them and upon the chest manager will devolve the difficult task of raising the sum which will be required to meet these budgets. Hundreds of our citizens under the leadership of Mr. Sol Heumann will enlist themselves in an effort to raise funds to meet these budgets.

Institutions In Debt "It is a sound argument that a period of stress and increased demands should be met, but the hard fact remains that the agencies of our city have been making efforts to meet greater needs with reduced appropriations. This condition cannot continue without seriously threatening the very existence of our Catholic institutions.

Everyone of our ten agencies failed to meet their expenditures of last year. In other words, they were actually in debt. It is, therefore, good common sense and good Christianity to amass deficits when help to show men how to live them.

Clarity Specific Steps that must be taken, Dr. Carroll said that "Catholic youth of this country must take advantage of the large pamphlet library that has been built up as a guide and an introduction to the study of world problems. Youth in this country," Dr. Carroll asserted, "should be acquainted with youth organizations in other nations and jointly they should decide what they shall do to build peace world organizations."

The best persons are those that are best. That is why good men are worth listening to; they help to show men how to live them.
