YOUTH'S ANSWER TO ANOTHER WAR ASKED BY WRITER

Uncle Dave Points To Sufferings At Home When War Comes

By UNCLE DAVE
Another Armistice Day is approaching, and while we observe it and express thanksgiving for the cessation of carnage, we find ourselves, as we have for five or six years past, in the midst of grave rumors and apprehensions of yet another Armageddon.

What has youth to say about it? We are often told that youth must fight the war, if another war should come, and therefore that the burden must fall upon youth. But is this the real truth? I often think that the youths who march out from their homes arrayed in the panoply of war and who subsequently risk their lives on the battlefield are not the real sufferers.

Those among them who survive unscathed, as though they were with no great suffering, they are well-fed and conditioned to hardship, the whole energies of their people at home are directed toward seeing that they are well-supplied and that nothing, so that their efficiency as fighters shall not be impaired.

Much of the time of these youths is spent behind the actual lines of fire during which they are well-fed and catered to by innumerable welfare organizations that supply them with inexhaustible entertainment.

Those who survive uninjured usually come out of the service better men than they went into it. It is beside the point to argue that all these things are done to prepare them for slaughter, since, in past wars at least, the majority of them have survived unhurt. This time of real suffering is reserved for the years of depression and joblessness that follow the war.

Those At Home
For these reasons, we are disposed to think that the parents and the children who remain at home or whose homes may be devastated are often the real sufferers. They live in constant anguish for the safety of their sons and daughters and they often lack the bare necessities of life.

They endure the greatest hardships and are unprepared to endure them. They are the forgotten people of the war. I think unquestionably true that more children and old people died or were permanently disabled from malnutrition and starvation during the last war than there were soldiers killed or maimed at the front.

And war being what it is today these innocent people are often subjected to all the terrors of the firing line and are undisciplined to bear them. And what of the children? I imagine they must wonder what sort of world they have been born into.

Insurance Expires
Therefore I say to youth, full of energy and eager for the romance of high adventure, think of those whom you would leave behind if you meet death, your troubles are over, but your dependent parents at home must go through long years of hardship.

Even today the insurance payments that have been going to thousands of dependent mothers and fathers in this country whose sons were killed in the last war are about to expire. If these payments are not extended what prospects have these old people in the years to come? And we are indeed fortunate in this country since we are able to provide for these dependents as no other country can.

Let us think of these things as we observe Armistice Day and pledge ourselves to the cause of peace and justice among nations and among our people at home. What price glory?

Urge Children To Avert Breaking Of Street Lamps

Attention has been called to the fact that there is a tremendous, unnecessary waste and damage to street lamps and globes in the city of Rochester.

We hope that our Catholic children will take it upon themselves to try in their own neighborhoods to reduce such waste, which last month alone amounted to over $1000.

Halloween is upon us, and we should like to remind our boys and girls that they can have just as much fun with pranks causing no damage as they can by those which destroy property and involve money.

Grade Inspects Rundel Library

The Seventh Grade of the Immaculate Conception School received an invitation to go on a tour of the newest structure in Rochester the Rundel Memorial Building.

The invitation was greeted with much enthusiasm. The appointed date a group of very excited boys and girls, accompanied by their teachers, entered this fascinating library. The building, we were informed, is not really a public library but the new home of the Rochester Public Library.

We were conducted on our tour by members of the staff. The most interesting room, in my estimation, is the children's room. Here we found several charming attractions. They popped up in the most unexpected corners. The best is the magic book-case.

The rest of the building is devoted to books for older people. The variety of books is astonishing. The History room contains original documents from the History of Rochester. The Art room contains original drawings and paintings by famous painters. It cost a million dollars to build this building. This fact combined with the size of the building would send a thrill or two through anyone who lives in New York City.

But these are only a fraction of the fine things this wonderful place contains. I hope all of the school children of Rochester will have the opportunity given to us, the chance to see the marvelous place for which Mr. Rundel donated so much money.

OSWEGO-St. Patrick's parochial school in this village was adjudged the winner in the recent questionnaire contest conducted among the schools by the county as a feature of the observance of Fire Prevention Week.

The contest was sponsored by the Tioga County Firemen's Association. Second place in the contest was won by Miss Mary Carrigan's sixth grade class at the Central School, Oswego, and third honors went to Smithboro village school.

Questionnaires were submitted to all school children, the questions asked pertaining to conditions in home as to fire prevention. In the county, 2,700 questionnaires were distributed and about 2,800 were returned to the committee filed out.

Three banners were offered as prizes. Clifford D. Halliday was chairman of the committee in charge of the event.

Tells Hardships In Mission Work

Mission work is very important to the Catholic Church. It is carried on in the four corners of the globe.

Zealous missionaries suffer great hardships which would be beyond the endurance of most of us. Traveling many miles by foot or on donkey and with no conveniences whatever, sometimes they hardly have the bare necessities of life.

These holy men and women devote their entire life in bringing souls to their Creator. No matter what hardships they endure, they are happy for every soul they bring to the flock and the Shepherd. This is truly a great work. We should all pray for them and take an active part in this work.

Clyde School Makes Report On Missions

In a letter on Holy Childhood activities sent to Father Mooney the following was reported:
"Last week we celebrated Mission Week in our school in several ways. Every day we said extra prayers for this intention. On Friday afternoon we had a mission entertainment in our hall. We had mission songs, short speeches and lantern slides."
The check enclosed covers the missions. We are sorry that the amount is not bigger.
Next Sunday we hope all to go to Holy Communion and offer our prayers for our missionaries.
Your respectfully,

PLAY "SCRAMMAGE"

On this page you will find (between the advertisements) lines of type which contain the names of college teams paired in the football games scheduled for next Saturday. The letters have been jumbled so that you will have to study each line to solve the problem of what names are hidden in it. (EXAMPLE: "Nay, vary M!" when unscrambled would reveal Army-Navy.) You see it can be simple when you get the swing of it. Entrants must give name, home address, age, and school.

"Yes," the teacher explained "quite a few plants and flowers have dog in an antecedent. For example, there dog-wood, dog-rose, and dog-violet. Can you think of any other?"
One pupil raised his hand.
"Yes, George, what is it?" asked the teacher.
