Campaign for Maternity Care To Enlist Aid of Health Groups

State and local public health officials and representatives of the Tuberculosis and Health Associations will actively cooperate in the campaign to provide good maternity care, to be launched by the Genesee Medical Society on Friday, March 5, at the Chamber of Commerce.

With Dr. James K. Quigley, Chairman of the Maternal Welfare Committees of the State and Monroe County Medical Societies in charge, speakers at a luncheon meeting at the Chamber will include Dr. Elizabeth M. Gardiner of Albany, Director of the Division of Infancy, Maternity and Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health; Dr. George Kosmak, Editor of the American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology and former President of the Maternity Center Association of New York City, Dr. Arthur M. Johnson, Rochester Health Officer, and Dr. A. D. Kaiser, representing the Tuberculosis and Health Association.

An educational program to save mothers and new born babies and reduce crippling complications of childbirth will be outlined with facts presented concerning the need of adequate attention during the period before the child is born.

Special consideration will be given to the findings of a study made by the County Medical Society dealing with abortions, cause of one quarter of maternal deaths and other preventable conditions.

Joseph P. MacSweeney, Chairman of the Rochester Committee of the Tuberculosis and Health Association, today announced the appointment of a cooperating committee to stimulate meeting attendance and to enlist permanent interest of women's groups in the City.

Mrs. John M. Foley is chairman. Other members include Mrs. Louis Langie, Mrs. Irving Walker and Mrs. Rosalia Lorits, R. N.

Appointed by John C. Malloch, County Health Committee Chairman, as representatives in the area outside of the city are Mrs. Lillian Jones Woodruff of Brighton, Chairman; Mrs. Florence Justice of Greece and Mrs. Fred Hussey of Irondequoit.

Named on State Squires Committee

J. Franklin Fennell of Rochester Council appointed by State Deputy Michael F. Walsh to a newly formed Columbian Squires promotion and organization committee attended a special meeting of the committee in New York last week.

The committee was formed at a special meeting of representative leaders of the Knights of Columbus from many parts of the New York jurisdiction called by State Deputy Walsh to give strong impetus to the Columbian Squires movement.

THE LIFE OF JESUS — LESSON 3

This is the third of a series of articles to supplement the weekly study club outline on the LIFE OF JESUS, furnished by the Sodalists of Nazareth College. It is recommended that these articles be clipped and saved for reference reading.

THE RICH YOUNG MAN

Jesus has just blessed the children and mothers of Perea and was moving on His way, once more, followed by a constantly increasing throng of admirers. As He walked down this road, He met a young man of wealth and distinction, a large landholder, and a ruler in the local district. The youth was virtuous, with high ideals, realizing his position and his wealth, determined to be worthy of both; he was ambitious, eager to do great things which would prove him worthy of the honor bestowed upon him. He was, in our modern parlance, "a gentleman," and wanted to be nothing else.

WELL-INTENTIONED

As Jesus approached, the young man was stirred. Jesus was inspiring; He professed to teach, and actually taught, what made man grander and more noble. Even for such as he, Jesus might have a seasonable word to give, the young man thought. Jesus spoke of the Kingdom of Heaven, of eternal life; in that He seemed to place the goal of perfect being. "Therefore, thought this young man, if he would win a word of counsel from Him, he too must make eternal life his goal. The people around Jesus were enthusiastic for Him; they would approve nothing more than deference shown to Him; therefore, to pay Him public reverence would duly add to his own reputation."

"He decided to pay Him respect. As He passed by, he would treat Him as a wise man in the country. He would show Jesus honor. Surely, for his attentions, the rich young man would receive some favor, if only some word of wisdom, and his place in the esteem of his neighbors would be higher than it had ever been before." When the throng passed by, the young man made as if he would join it. The people of course, opened a pathway for him, for he was a personage in the town. Soon, he was in the very centre of the crowd. He went down on one knee before Jesus in the road. He looked up into His face with eyes meant to be loyal. On his face was an expression of frankness and honesty and a love of all that was straight and noble.

The young man was well dressed; his voice was mellow and attractive and he asked Jesus, "Good master, what good should I do that I may possess everlasting life?"

MEETS DISAPPOINTMENT

"Jesus looked at the good-natured, straight, well-groomed youth who knelt before Him; He was pleased; yet He was not enthusiastic. The young man was only doing what might have been expected of him, and as for what he said, Jesus seemed inclined to underrate it. It was a compliment, no more; and mere compliments meant nothing. Jesus said, "Why callest thou Me good? None is good but our God but if thou will enter into life, thou knowest the commandments, keep the commandments."

This was hardly the reception the young man had expected. It was so commonplace: he knew the commandments, as every earnest young man did. So he asked the Lord "Which?"

The answer was even more disconcerting. Jesus seemed not to care: and He said, "Thou shalt do no murder; thou shalt not commit adultery; thou shalt not steal thou shalt not bear false witness do no fraud; honour Thy father and thy mother, and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

The young man was disappointed, for every self-respecting Jew of his station respected and kept the ten commandments.

CALL TO CHRIST

So he said to Him, "Master all these things have I kept from my youth, what is yet wanting to me?" Now he was in earnest. His first attempt had merely been conventional, a pose to increase his prestige: now he wanted to convince Jesus he meant what he said.

At once Jesus responded. His eyes turned toward the young man, a warm glow spread over the Divine Face, and He said to him, "Yet one thing is wanting to thee, if thou will be perfect. Go sell all whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in Heaven, and come follow Me."

Here we can see Jesus' habit of giving more than has been requested, an overwhelming response to every act of faith and recognition by an increase of both His generosity can never be equalled.

A VOCATION THWARTED

When Jesus said, Go, sell all, come and follow Me," utter dismay and disappointment were on the young man's face. With all his wealth, he had hoped to be of service to Jesus, now he was asked to get rid of his wealth and join a group of Galilean laborers. It was not common sense to give up such wealth. "And when the young man had heard this word, being struck sorrowful at the saying, he went away sad, for he had great possessions."

"Who knows where he went? Perhaps he played his part well, keeping all the rules required by his social status; yet he would never forget those eyes that looked on him and asked him to [illegible] friend, that soul which cleaved to him and promised him not only everlasting life, but over and above everlasting treasure pressed down and flowing over. And the joy for a moment would fade from his cheek, and the heart would shiver, and he would need to shake himself and turn aside to his 'many possessions' to convince himself that he was a happy man."
