U.S. Watches Peace Moves On 2 Fronts

Administration Grapples With World, Domestic Difficulties

WASHINGTON Peace, not only international but domestic, is absorbing the attention of Washington. No one knows how it is to be attained. The war knows just what steps should be taken but the hope that it can be achieved is fervent for all that.

The President has given impetus to the movement in both directions. From the domestic viewpoint official spokesmen of the Administration have intimated that the program from now on will be to build up confidence to bring about unity of effort and purpose, to "win the budget." The old tactic is to be abandoned. The "anti-trust" program is to be tempered with encouragement.

Whether this mood will prevail when Congress reconvenes in special session remains to be seen. The Administration has not been obliged to retreat.

The most important, and probably the most controversial, topic of social legislation, the capstone of the program, is wages and hours. This ended in stalemate in the past session. It is not expected that it will have easy going during the coming session. Large industries, for the most part, are in favor of the proposal to fix a basic minimum wage and maximum hours of labor. The opposition comes mainly from the small industries and there has been no evidence that it has abated.

Compromise has been suggested in other respects, however, the Administration shows more of a disposition to compromise in order to stimulate business, to modify the tariff, to fix the price of wheat, to work with the labor in the field of taxation.

The score from the domestic viewpoint, is the strife in the ranks of labor, the struggle of the Federation of Labor and the C. I. O. This has its repercussions in Washington, centering mainly around the Labor-Relations Board. It is, and probably will be, charged with favoring to one side or the other. There is hope that a compromise can be found.

Cautiously enough, there has been a result of the rift in the labor ranks, a favorable shifting of ground. Organized labor shows signs of turning against the Labor Relations Board because of its alleged support of one side or the other.

The Federation of Labor, at bottom, holds to its traditional policy of adjusting wages by negotiation, rather than by statutory regulation. It fears that the fixing of a minimum wage may pave the way for the fixing of a maximum wage eventually. It prefers what it calls the democratic method, that is, negotiation.

Only available Chapin

On the other hand, there is a growing disposition among business men and industrialists to give the Labor Relations Board a further trial. This is because the Board might prove to be the only available means to which they can appeal if they found themselves caught in the crossfire of the warring labor factions.

Franco Gets Religion Into The Schools

Rehabilitation Program Provides for Instruction

COMPOSTELA The Franco Government was represented at the National Assembly of the National Catholic Confederation of Fathers of Families held here by Dr. Enrique Saner, vice-president of the Culture and Education Commission of the Burgos Government.

The presence of Dr. Saner, as well as the fact that the auditorium of the University of Compostela was made available for the convention, indicates the Government's attitude toward and approval of this confederation of Catholic parents. It was the first time that a delegate of the Spanish State has attended a strictly Catholic assembly such as this.

Since this is the jubilee year at Compostela, the Fathers of Families selected this city for the national convention and their assembly was in a sense a pilgrimage to the shrine of St. James. There the same indulgences may be gained as during the jubilee or holy years at Rome. More than a half million pilgrims flocked before the relics of Santiago.

Other important pilgrimages this year have been organized by Acción Católica, the largest organization of the young women's group. Although the majority of the Catholic youth of Spain are at the front, nevertheless among the adolescents and older boys, were seen whole battalions of youths wearing the red beret of the Reguete.

As to the convention of the Fathers of Families, most of the delegates were older men, the fathers of sons who are at the front. Many prominent members of the Confederation are dead, and still others are prisoners in the Red zone.

In the presence of the Most Rev. Tomas Muniz Fabian, Archbishop of Compostela and military officials, Dr. Saner outlined the educational policy of the Franco Government.

The Burgos Commission, he stated, had accepted representation of the Fathers of Families into the official groups regulating teaching and education in the Nationalist State.

At a special meeting held last October, he cited the members of the Confederation residing in the "liberated zone," and stated that a document for presentation to General Franco in which was set forth the needs and suggestions of this Catholic parents organization.
