ALL SET

Grandpappy Morgan, a hillbilly of the Ozarks, had wandered off into the woods and failed to return for supper so young Tolliver was sent to look for him. He found him standing in the bushes.

"Gittin' dark, Grandpap," the boy ventured.

"Yep."

"Supper-time Grandpap?"

"Yep."

"Ain't ye hungry?"

"Yep."

"Wal, air ye comin' home?"

"Nope."

"Why ain't ye?"

"Call."

"Why can't ye?"

"Standin' in a bar tran."

INSTALLMENT I

The first half of the game between Branton and Lincoln high school had so far been scoreless. The timekeeper had his pistol in hand waiting to signal the end of the half, and the Branton rooters who had followed their team all the way to Lincoln were pleading for a touchdown.

Down on the field, the Branton team came out of its huddle. They lined up for a moment, and then Tuck Tucker faded back from his half back position on the ball was snapped. The Branton rooters rose with a yell. The famous passing combination of Tucker and Trotter was going into action again.

Tuck Tucker was almost hit by the 30-yard line when he got the pass away. Ben Trotter whose long legs had carried him far down the field was surrounded by the whole Lincoln backfield when he recovered the ball. Some of the Lincoln players made the best up-and-tee the ball away from all those outstretched hands, and then squirmed free of clutching arms and diving bodies. He raced ten yards across the goal line and the Branton rooters went into hysterics.

As the Branton team filed under the stands after the try for goal had been successful, Ben Trotter dropped a long arm over Tuck Tucker's powerful shoulders. Tuck looked around at Ben and grinned.

"Nice catch, chum," he said.

"Nice fast pass," retorted Ben. "You must have put a special delivery stamp on that one."

"Heck, I could send them by parcel post with no extra charge, and still manage to get them," replied Tuck.

Cole Barnes was walking just behind the two boys as they entered the dressing room. He gazed at Tuck's light-colored middie and thought of the many other boys who had been overplayed on a Branton team. As individual players they were both good, and as a passing combination they were simply unbeatable. The fact that they were inseparable companions and off the field probably had a lot to do with it.

"All right, you two," Coach Barnes said with mock gruffness. "Get out throwing bouquets to each other, and at dawn I've got a few things to say before the second half."

Whatever Coach Barnes said between the halves was effective for the team were back on the field and proceeded to make their victory over Lincoln convincing. The final score was 26-7 and the passing combination of Tucker and Trotter scored two of the four touchdowns and figured prominently in the marches that led to the others.

A number of buses had brought the Branton team and spectators to Lincoln. The players had all ridden in one bus on the way over, but when Ben and Tuck came to board the team bus after the game they found every seat taken. All morning fans had crowded in a eager to make the ride home with their heroes.

"Hey!" yelled Harry Short, captain of the team.

ANSWERS TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLES

1. Crossword Puzzle Solution.

Looking out from a bus window they saw the beautiful face of Marybelle Templeton.

Ben and Tuck, when he saw the beautiful face of Marybelle Templeton, he had a sudden idea. He had to clear out. The team isn't in yet!

"Let them stay," said Ben. "We'll ride in one of the other buses."

"No," protested Harry. "You don't have to do that. Come on in."

"Aw, wed rather ride with the upper class than with you common people anyway," Tuck grinned, turning away.

"Yeah, you just want to ride with the girls," Harry called after them.

Some of the other players took up the accusation and Ben and Tuck walked away under a deluge of kidding.

"Ben! Tuck!" Hearing their names called the two boys looked around. They saw Ben's sister and Tuck's sister and they walked over, greeting the girls through the open window.

"Any room in there?" Tuck inquired smiling at Thyra Thyra who was dark like her brother Ben and pretty looked around and then shook her head in disappointment.

"We're all full," she replied.

Tuck and Ben looked at each other and shook their heads sadly. "We're not wanted anywhere," said Ben.

"Myie, we've got to go," said Ben. "We've got to go to the game."

"You had better go," said Thyra. "You had better go to the game."

"Hey!" yelled Harry Short, captain of the team.

"Hey!" yelled Harry Short, captain of the team.

Marybelle waved them to the bus seats on either side of her. Then she flashed her gorgeous blue eyes on each of them in turn.

"What a marvellous game you both played!" she cried in her highly cultivated voice. Marybelle had spent a year at finishing school from which she had returned with a number of very fine and some stunning clothes and very grand gifts. Just why she was now attending an ordinary high school was somewhat of a mystery, but there were rumors that she had lost a good deal of his money.

At any rate, she had been in school only a couple of months, and Ben and Tuck knew her only slightly. Like the other fellows in school they were considerably impressed by her, but they were surprised to see her at an out-of-town game. Usually she spent her week-end in trips to the game at nearby preparatory schools, and occasionally colleges, much to the envy of the girls who knew her.

Tuck and Ben settled down in their seats and tried to make suitable replies to Marybelle's questioning remarks. "What they caught each other's glasses they looked a bit sheepish, but most of the time they were quiet on Marybelle's face. They were long and thin, and they were equally between them. They were in some way of a date with each other, and they were both smiling. Ben and Tuck were both smiling.

"Ben!" Tuck called to him. "Ben!" Tuck called to him. "Ben!" Tuck called to him.

"Can't she agree Tuck?" And she sure has the look! Just about the snappiest thing this town has seen in a long time."

Ben grinned. "Guess we'll have to bribe some of the fellows to fill up the team's bus at every out-of-town game," he said.

To Be Continued Next Week

HOLY CHILDHOOD ASSOCIATION
Rev. Leo C. Mooney, Director
Rev. John S. Randall, Asst.

Boys and girls, we want you to watch the column each week. We're going to tell you all about the Holy Childhood for our schools. You can write and tell us all about your activities and we will be glad to print it in this space.

Last Sunday your Fathers and Mothers joined the Society for the Propagation of the Faith. Within another few days you are going to have your chance to help the priests and sisters who are teaching children about God. Sure, you know what the Holy Childhood does. It takes your pennies and dimes little babies. That's the priest can baptize them and teach them about God. It only costs you a penny a month to belong. And whenever you give up ice cream or candy or refuse to go to the movies, you can take that money and give it to the other boys and girls in your class. You can buy a baby.

Very soon now I plan to visit your school and tell you all about the missions. We have a movie of this work and maybe we'll have time to let you see it.

Reports:

A few schools have already begun to save their pennies. St. Alphonsus School in Auburn has paid the dues for the year. That's the kind of spirit we like to see. Knowing that perhaps you'll get busy so as not to fall behind.

The children of St. John's School in Clyde are also enrolled in the Holy Childhood and but of all last week they ransomed a little pagan baby. Now they have the privilege of naming the little one. We are sure that your class would like to do the same. Just get busy. The only way to have Sister send it into the office and we will do the rest.

"Sam, are you ever tired with enthusiasm?"
"Yeah!" from every job I tackle.

THE ADVENTURES OF PETER PEN

Today we find three very unusual souls. King Smal, Tazze and the Hermit. They lost the Snow Star flower, and the King thinks his only son, Prince Pickle, is permanently turned to stone.

"I have an idea," commences the Hermit. "Shut up, you old meek-head! You and your ideas have caused me enough trouble. I want my son back, that is all I want!"

"Why not listen to his idea?" advises Tazze. "What can you lose? You don't have to follow it, and maybe it will be a good one this time." "Go ahead," warns Smal. "But I warn you, it better be good!"

The old man proceeds: "Not far from here are some giant bats that have great strength. They are strong enough to carry us on their backs. By riding them we can reach the Cave of the Gnomes and find the gang."

"Lead on," commands Smal. "Giant bats," he grumbles. "The only bats I know of are in your thick head!" But the three trot on and we shall see if the Hermit knows what he is talking about.
