FORDHAM FOUNDS BUREAU FOR JOBS

NEW YORK—A placement bureau to create trained personnel service and guarantee graduates to industry on a replacement basis was opened at Fordham University.

The bureau is under the direction of Dwight F. Bracken, former Assistant Dean of Men at the University of Illinois. The plan is described as "a basic industry in manufacturing trained personnel." Boys in their second year, according to the system, will begin training for work they expect to take after graduation. If they show weakness after receiving employment, industry can turn them back to the college for more seasoning

The plan, according to the Rev. Robert I. Gannon, S.J., President of Fordham University, aims to "service" graduates, "buying them out on various jobs, until both employer and employee are mutually happy." "It costs from $4,000 to $7,000 to turn out a finished product," Father Gannon said, referring to students. "We get a job for our product and forget him."

Religion attaches the emotions and passions of man to lofty objects and thus purifies, chastens and consecrates them.
