Waning of Religious Influence in Home Deplored By Many

PHILADELPHIA - The restoration of modern American family life on the old basis of religion and piety was urged by speakers in addresses made at the convention of the Catholic Conference on Family Life here.

The addresses, calling attention to the waning of religious influence in the home and the infiltration of modern pagan spirit and ideas even into some Catholic homes.

DEDICATE ISLAND TO CHRIST KING

This life-size, bronze statue of Christ the King by Samuel J. Kitson, was dedicated on the top of rocky King Island in the Bering Sea, by Rev. Bernard J. Hubbard, S. J. (inset) on the Feast of Christ the King. The Eskimo inhabitants of the island, who are entirely Catholic, live in houses built on stilts and lashed to the cliffs. As shown in the above photograph. On the festive occasion, they were proclaimed that the island should henceforth be known as the Island of Christ the King.
