IN ONE EAR

By ART KELLY

During the past three or four years the privilege of attending radio broadcasts has been accepted more and more by the general public. Many stations now invite the public to attend their local presentations and even big networks admit visitors to popular programs. Through this practice John Q. Public has learned much of the art of broadcasting.

Among other things, he has become familiar with the signs used by radio production men for guiding programs on the air. He has discovered that a sound effects man can imitate just about anything with a few queer looking nick-nacks that resemble the left over usually found around a machine shop.

What John Q. doesn't know is that the radio is in many cases a twenty-four hour a day proposition. At WHAM for instance, engineers have a schedule that permits twenty-four hour a day operation five days a week. The time between sign-off and sign-on is used for maintenance purposes. During the station's silent hours tubes are checked, adjustments made on equipment, new parts installed, electrical measurements made and apparatus checked for possible sources of electrical or mechanical failure.

During the week of February 8th, the Rochester School of the Air celebrated its fifth anniversary of broadcasting over WHAM. Harry Carpenter, specialist in Science for the Rochester Public Schools, was pioneer teacher of the radio school as was WHAM a trail blazer in presenting education to school children via radio.

The number of classes and pupils has increased steadily during the five year period. Teachers in schools throughout New York State from Heuvelton, near Ogdensburg, to Collins, in the southern part of the state, have written in to enroll their classes for the radio program. Nearly seven hundred classes with fifty-three thousand pupils are regular listeners to the radio programs.

The old saying of "here today and gone tomorrow" was never more true than it is today in radio. Thinking back over the past year and a half, many names can be remembered that are today completely forgotten by the public. However, there are exceptions to every rule and the exception to this one is the team of Amos and Andy. Since they began their radio career over a Chicago station nearly ten years ago, the NBC headlines of Negro characters have written approximately 4,000,000 words. Six million words are the equivalent of 60 fat novels of 10,000 words each, an output averaging a host of letters.

It seems that the listening public does like good clean entertainment.

For the next few months, Jack Lee and Dick Toole of WHAM, are going to be going places and seeing things. The boys are handling WHAM's new program "Pepodent Puzzlers" which will take them each Sunday to a popular spot around Rochester. On the program's initial airing, microphones were set up at Rochester's Seneca Park Zoo on the air just at feeding time it is needless to say that the show got off to a roaring start.

The Sunday afternoon feature 4:00 to 4:30 is much the same as a man in the street program, but an "extra" touch is added by broadcasting from a spot where exciting activities are in progress. This idea not only assures a large crowd from which to select persons to be interviewed but also puts good live color on each broadcast. Examples of locale from which Pepodent Puzzlers might be broadcast are Rochester's parks, skating rinks, bob runs or in warmer weather fairs, circuses or carnivals.

Jack and Dick never have a hard time getting people to "step up to the mike" because each person interviewed receives a present of a Pepodent product.

Perhaps no move on the part of radio has been hailed with so much enthusiasm by both press and public as was the signing of Arturo Toscanini by NBC to conduct the recently formed NBC Symphony Orchestra. In fact no sooner had the NBC Symphony begun its distinguished series of symphonic broadcasts under the celebrated Toscanini than requests by the hundreds began pouring in on NBC for photographs and autographs of the distinguished conductor.

During past weeks requests have grown to such proportions that NBC has been unable to publish them in a limited edition, that will tell the story of the NBC Symphony Orchestra's creation and will contain new portrait studies of Toscanini, Dr. Arturo Rodinski and Pierre Monteux, its three guest conductors.

A series of libretto, unpublished photographs will give the reader a view behind the scenes of the NBC Symphony in rehearsal. Bettina Stevinke has contributed about one hundred original charcoal drawings of conductors and musicians of the famous musical organization. The book, a valuable addition to the musical library of American music lovers, will be available at cost.

Dance Orchestra Girls, Mother Enter Convent

SAN ANTONIO, (NC) — Four blood sisters, members of an all-girl orchestra, and their mother have been admitted as postulants into the Incarnate Word and Blessed Sacrament Convent here. The four girls and their mother are the sole surviving members of their family, the father having died here last summer.

The young women are the Misses Gladys, Hazel, Dorothy and Evelyn Jones. Their mother is Mrs. Mary Jones. The girls were members of the "Texas Rangelites," a dance orchestra of which Miss Mary McRae herself is a convert to the Catholic Faith, is the leader. The only other member of the group Miss Willean Gray became a postulant in the same convent a week after the Jones family was admitted. The Misses Jones and their mother were admitted with the proper recommendation from the Very Rev. A. J. Dussau, O.M.I., who had known them in St. Mary's parish here for 12 years. Miss Gray who became a convert three years ago is the only Catholic in her family.

The Misses Jones had long considered the step of entering the convent, the Rev. Alois J. Merkovich states, writing in The Southwestern Messenger here. They played their last dance engagement with the "Texas Rangelites" at New Year's Eve. The organization had toured the United States and the Hawaiian Islands.

Finds Spain Greeting Boomerang To Its Promoters

Four signers state that they meant merely to extend greetings to democracy if these are construed as not endorsing the Barcelona government. 34 signers take this stand.

Only 17 signers are shown definitely to have stated that they meant to express sympathy for the Barcelona faction. Five signers gave statements considered too inclusive to warrant their being placed definitely in any one of the previously mentioned groups. Four signers were consulted but had nothing to say.

The survey made by the NCWC News Service revealed that four senators in statements issued to the Service retraced their signatures, a total of 26 senators and representatives did not mean to favor the Barcelona government, four representatives meant the message only as "greeting to Democracy," 17 Congressmen
