Maharajah Pays Missioner's Fare

BOOMBAY (N.Y.)—At the request of the Maharajah of Probander, Father Gades, missionary at Baidol, will visit Probander monthly. On his last visit the Maharajah asked the missionary why he did not travel there by plane. When Father Gades said that he could not afford the expense, the Maharajah replied: "Hereafter you will fly here every month and the State will defray the expense."

Children should be interested in reading their diocesan newspaper.

WORLD PILGRIMS' DESTINATION

A lovely panorama of Budapest, Hungary, showing the famous Danube River and in the background St. Stephen's Basilica. Here next May 20th to May 30th thousands of pilgrims from the United States and other parts of the world will gather to participate in the impressive ceremonies of the 34th International Eucharistic Congress.

Sail with Rev. John F. Muehle

TOLEDO, O. In an interview at the Toledo last week, Rt. Rev. Magr. E. G. Bordogh, National Chairman for the 34th International Eucharistic Congress in Budapest, Hungary, May 20 to May 30, announced that plans for American participation in the Congress had been progressing steadily and had not been adversely affected by recent European political developments.
He expressed confidence that there was very little possibility of any further outbreak of hostilities in Europe during the coming year. He called attention to the recent statement of President Herbert E. Hoover, who has been traveling in Europe, and our recently appointed Ambassador to England, Joseph P. Kennedy, to the effect that they did not anticipate any war in Europe in the near future, and also said that the conciliatory measures now being undertaken between England and Italy gave promise of a lasting peace.
Monsignor Bordogh said that reservations for membership in the various pilgrimage tours arranged for Americans were still being received from all parts of the country, from priests and members of the laity who wished to combine the spiritual benefits of the congress and the advantages of traveling through Europe with one of the pilgrimage groups at substantially reduced rates.
Probably the largest number of American pilgrims ever to travel abroad at one time will be in Budapest for the Congress, accompanied by hundreds of the laity, and representing practically every one of the Archdioceses and Dioceses in the United States.
Many of the pilgrims will take a special cruise through the Mediterranean after the Congress, visiting Egypt, the Holy Land, Rome, and many other places of historical and cultural interest.
One group of pilgrims, graduates of the University of Innsbruck, have arranged for a reunion celebration to be held at the University on May 23 before continuing to Budapest for the opening of the Congress.
A delegation of pilgrims to represent the Diocese of Rochester at the Budapest Congress is being organized under the direction of the Rev. John F. Muehle, 4326 St. Paul Boulevard, Rochester. The party will sail from New York on May 4 on the American Liner "Washington." Those who are interested in accompanying Father Muehle to the Congress can obtain complete information and free booklets describing the trip by writing to him now.

ERECTION OF ALTAR

The altar is securely set on a firm and rigid foundation.
To give the proper decorative-architectural viewpoint, the altar has been set with thought given to its visibility, prominence and surroundings. This was especially carefully considered to avoid any incongruity or lack of effectiveness.
An imposing and impressive retable of carved, gilded wood, relieved with ornamentalities and figure work, rises approximately 20 feet above the nave floor. It contains a real tapestry, handwoven from an original painting and suspended with foliated ornaments.
Gold background
Behind the main ceiling of the sanctuary, covering the altar and the celebrant, is a tester which, architecturally speaking, gives additional height, prominence and dignity to the altar.
A Gothic foliated ceiling has been painted above the tester and the color of the walls has been extended into the vault above to give added height and delicacy. This has been overlaid with a pattern of pure gold to form a net, but still leaving a background for the altar.
The steps of the altar and sanctuary, as well as those outside the Communion rail are considered as one base to the altar. They have been so arranged that the altar appears to stand much higher in the sanctuary.
Delicate Inlaywork
Sanctuary space is limited and defined by delicate wrought-iron rail, which on the Gospel side, rises to a lectern-pulpit, so ingeniously constructed that it is quite transparent. Through it, the altar is plainly visible.
On the point of popular appeal, thought was given to erecting the altar with such dignity, architectural significance and aesthetic materials that the whole would appeal not only to all cultured and art-interested people of the community.
Handwoven Tapestry
The two important features of this altar are the altar and the tapestry. The altar is of Gothic design, richly inlaid with Florentine marble mosaics of various colors. The tapestry has been done in the genuine handwoven manner and represents the Adoration of both the shepherds and the Magi with a central figure of the Blessed Virgin holding the Divine Infant.

Children Told Of Life's Game

By Albert Higdon, Mt. Carmel Parish
The church candles were gleaming and voices raised in song when Father George McMillen started the third day of the mission for children at Mt. Carmel Church Wednesday of last week, with a prayer.
Before the sermon he told every little Catholic who would attend the mission and Mass at 8 o'clock on Friday would receive a remembrance present.
Like all other missionaries, Father McMillen told a story about a Holy Priest who could not reveal what he had heard in confession. Refusing to tell what he had heard he was tortured to death. For this he is now a saint.
In the sermon he stressed the importance of Confession and Communion. He also talked about the fourth commandment "Honor Thy Father and Thy Mother." He pointed out the importance of obedience to our parents. After the sermon he gave his blessing.
After everyone sang "Holy God We Praise Thy Name," the Bishop of Rochester, the Most Rev. James E. Kearney, came out for Benediction. As the Bishop raised the Blessed Sacrament on high, every boy and girl bowed the head in adoration.
Following benediction the Bishop told a story of a game. He said the missionary was the coach and we were the players. He said for us to play the game fair and square He said life is the game. He pointed out that following the rules would bring success. If we win we will go to Heaven for eternal happiness. If we sneak and slide and cheat we will lose and go to Hell.
With the words, "God Bless You," the Bishop ended his sermon.
