IN ONE EARE

By ART KELLY

Well, sir, things are pretty dull around WHAM in the early morning lately. Ever since Pete and Joe left for their vacations, morning hours have been quiet for the boys on the milkman's shift.

I really think that Tom Murray and myself got a greater kick out of Pete and Joe's daily performance than most listeners. Standing by we could see the program as well as hear it, thereby getting in on a priceless supply of humor, pantomime and unpredictable tricks.

Also not to be forgotten are the many times that the boys received cookies, candy and fruit from listeners. Whenever a box was opened we were obliged to share the treat. Especially sweet in my memory are the thoughts of the many pounds of fudge that reached WHAM addressed to Pete and Joe.

After two months traveling the boys will return to WHAM for another series of programs.

Did you hear the Burns and Allen show last Monday night? If you did you were probably as much surprised as pleased to hear Glen Gray and his Casa Loma Orchestra working with the comedians.

Another record hangs on the walls of WHAM. Charlie Snyder, the transmitting staff, claims he holds the world's record for a long distance radio service. He has a letter from Philadelphia requesting that he travel to the "City of Brotherly Love" to fix an alling receiver. With expenses paid Charlie made the trip. P. S. He returned home by way of the dinosaurs. How's that, Buffalo? I got on the "wrong road," explained Charlie.

Hank and Herb WHAM veteran rural show, are off the air for the summer. The boys, Jack Lee and Gene Lane will be back in the fall to complete their sixth year of broadcasting. The seventh consecutive year begins in January of '39.

Dick Toole is back on the air with WHAM. Dick you remember handled Popodent Puzzlers over WHAM last spring and has also appeared many times on the Tropers program. He is filling the vacant spots WHAM's announcing schedule left by regular men going away on vacations.

By the way, have you a boy or girl in your home? If so why not suggest that he or she listen to WHAM next Saturday at 12:15 p. m. At that time each Saturday is presented the "McFarlin's Boys and Girls Club of the Air." According to Ira C. Sapoznik, Director of the Club the prime purpose of this organization is the promotion of sportsmanship and cooperation as well as recreational and safety education.

The program is thirty minutes in length and is produced by Mr. Sapoznik, former Public Relations Director for Rochester's Bureau of Parks and Division of Playgrounds.

Featured each week on the program is the pick of Rochester's juvenile talent. Along with news, city's playgrounds and safety areas are presented in a play built prepared and presented in cooperation with the Rochester Police Department and the Chamber of Commerce Safety Council.

And here is another interesting angle on the program. Approximately five hundred well known members of municipal state federal and character building agencies are honorary members of the "Boys and Girls Club." They also act as executive board members of the club. Membership in the Boys and Girls Club is obtainable free of charge and application may be made at McFarlin's Store. A flashy button and membership card goes to each new member. Official members of the club will be eligible for contests to be held later in the season by McFarlin's and WHAM.

If you were up in Genesee Valley Park last Sunday night during the band concert you probably wondered why a microphone was braving the blast of the Rochester Park Band. The reason is this. For the second consecutive year WHAM has exclusive broadcasting rights on the Sunday night band concerts originating in Genesee Valley Park. The series will again feature the outstanding music of the Rochester Park Band under the direction of George W. C. Matz.

The series on ten concerts will continue for eight weeks longer being on the air from 9:00 to 9:30 p. m.

One of radio's most colorful commentators, in my estimation, is Thomas Conrad Sawyer. He appears over WHAM each Tuesday and Thursday at 12:15 and offers material that is new, colorful and educational. For instance, let's take next Thursday's program. On that day he will tell the story of Lola Montez, "the flower of death." Even the title sounds interesting, doesn't it? Lola lived in the time of the California Gold Rush and much of her glamorous past is associated with those mad, early days of California's history. She left a trail of broken hearts and death wherever she trod. Other interesting items will be discussed by the noted author, traveler, observer and commentator including an interesting story about women's place in radio and a colorful tale about Leon Trotsky.

HARMONY PREVAILS AS IRELAND AS IRELAND Inducts its First President

DUBLIN (NC)—The installation of Dr. Douglas Hyde as first President of Ireland was accompanied by ceremonial pomp and dignity befitting the occasion. After a service in St. Patrick's Cathedral before which he was escorted to the former Royal pew by Dr. Gregg, Protestant Archbishop of Dublin, the President drove in state to Dublin Castle for the ceremony of installation.

The famous St. Patrick's Hall scene of many brilliant gatherings under the British regime was beautifully decorated. The robes of the Papal Nuncio and other church dignitaries added a note of color to the scene. The feature of the event was the amicable relations existing among all parties on the occasion which was regarded as a happy portent of a future made possible by the election of a president who really stands above and beyond any party.

Solemn Oath of Office
 When the President accompanied by the Chief Justice entered the Hall he was greeted by a fanfare of trumpets and then proceeded to the dais where he was met by Mr. de Valera, who spoke a few words in Irish. Then the President made a solemn declaration speaking in Irish. He said:

"In the presence of Almighty God I declare that I will faithfully and conscientiously in accordance with the Constitution and the law of the State discharge my duties as president and in the faith of the people of Ireland may God direct and sustain me."

The Great Seal was then presented to him by the Chief Justice. Mr. de Valera also speaking in Irish then addressed the President.

"On behalf of the Irish Nation, on behalf of the living those that dwell at home as well as our kin beyond the seas, on behalf also of the dead generations who longed to see this day but have not seen it, I salute you as our first President. You are now our President. You have been freely chosen under our own laws in heriting the authority and entitled to the respect which the people reserve to those whom they recognize to be their rightful chiefs but which for centuries they had to bestow upon a foreign king would enforce on them. In you we greet the successor of our rightful prince and in your acceptance of office we see the closing of the breach that has existed since the undoing of our nation at Kinsale. Worth of High Post.

"Not all the territory of Eireann, as at the moment, under your sway, is a LATHIBAL. But, high, but the power of our claim and the tenacity of the Gael in holding to what is his own and his own right. We are glad that you honor as at the moment, under your sway, is the justness of our claim and the tenacity of the Gael in holding to what is his own and his own right. We are glad that you honor as at the moment, under your sway, is the justness of our claim and the tenacity of the Gael in holding to what is his own and his own right.

"In your acceptance of office we see the closing of the breach that has existed since the undoing of our nation at Kinsale. Worth of High Post.

"Not all the territory of Eireann, as at the moment, under your sway, is a LATHIBAL. But, high, but the power of our claim and the tenacity of the Gael in holding to what is his own and his own right. We are glad that you honor as at the moment, under your sway, is the justness of our claim and the tenacity of the Gael in holding to what is his own and his own right.
