CHRISTIAN CRUSADE TO PROTECT YOUTH

Urged By Fr. Mooney At Syracuse Meet

SYRACUSE—The New York State Conference on Social Work was asked this week to ponder "what an aroused public opinion would accomplish if an alert and well-informed Church membership were to unite their forces in a Christian Crusade to safeguard youth's interest."

The speaker was the Rev. Vincent Mooney, C. S. C., Director of the Catholic Youth Bureau, National Catholic Welfare Conference, who said "youth and the Church-bound must be strengthened."

If a well-informed Church membership united in a Christian Crusade to help youth, Father Mooney said, "youth would be trained in a moral code embodied in the Commandments." "With that code as a guide and as restraining influence," he added, "tremendous strides would be made in the elimination of delinquency."

"Youth would also be helped immeasurably if the Church's membership would wage resistless warfare on salacious literature, on purveyors of smut on radio and screen. Owners of drug stores and gas stations, for example, might become mightily indignant if the Church's membership insisted that these places cease to be outlets for certain so-called sanitary and prophylactic merchandise used extensively in the corruption of youth's morals. Suppose they did resent it—at least youth's morals would be protected and that is the principal concern."

Use of Leisure Time

Saying "we hear a lot about worthy use of leisure time in these days of unlimited and enforced leisure," Father Mooney told the meeting "youth would approach the problem more intelligently if they saw in religion the basis for the moral principle underlying recreation." "Health and physical educators would accomplish something else besides more muscle building if they were to remind their students of these implications of the Fifth Commandment," he added.

In answer to the question—What can the Church do for Youth?—Father Mooney said, first, it could begin with the home. "Unfortunately and too frequently," he said, "the modern home is a broken home, where parents and children have lost sight of those sacred relationships which are deep-rooted in religious ideals. The Church can and should impress upon parents and children alike that there is a Commandment, 'Honor thy father and thy mother,' and that Christ is the Head of the House."

Second, Father Mooney said, the Church can "stress the importance of religious education." "Think what a transformation would take place," he said, "if parents would cooperate with the Church in the development of a well-balanced program of religious education for young people on the various age levels. In some instances it is being done today, but the pity of it is that so few are reached when there might be so many."

SOVIET AGENT REPORTS INCREASED 'RELIGIOUS FEELING' IN AMERICA

MOSCOW.—A bulletin of the Russian Godless Associations publishes a report of one of its agents, named Sarfadanow, who recently visited Europe and the United States. He found, it is stated, that, contrary to Europe, religious feeling in the United States has increased in the last year.

Agents of the Godless Associations, the report said, face grave difficulties in the United States and the "atheistic revolution" has had little effect in the United States and its neighboring country, Mexico. This, the bulletin said, shows that the atheists of the United States have not understood their situation.

SPAIN Today and Tomorow

Nationalists Seen Fighting To Save Spanish Civilization From Red Ruin

By Rev. Dr. Joseph V. Thorning and John V. Hinkel

This is another of a series of articles on Spain by the Rev. Dr. Joseph F. Thorning and John V. Hinkel, who went to Spain to make a first-hand study of the situation. In previous articles they pictured sidelights of the Civil War of interest to Catholics. In this and subsequent articles they will discuss the New Spain the Nationalists are building and the position the Church will occupy in it

BURGOS, SPAIN—That there can be any difference of opinion, even the slightest, among Catholics on the Spanish Civil War, seems impossible to these correspondents. After a six weeks' visit to Nationalist Spain, during which the present situation of the church on both sides in Spain was studied at first hand, conclusions on the religious phases the writers offer these principal of that conflict:

The question of the Spanish Civil War is an open and shut one for Catholics. The Spanish Reds are unmistakenly hostile to religion. Should they win the war, which does not seem possible at this time, then inevitably the Church will be persecuted further; remaining religious edifices will be profaned, and surviving priests and nuns and Brothers will be murdered, jailed or driven into exile.

Two reasons account for the Spanish Reds' hatred of the Catholic Church. In the first place, the Church is literally the cement which has united the people of Spain for centuries. Spain is a miniature League of Nations. No other European nation has so many racial or ethnological groups, all products of different cultures and each struggling to preserve its particular culture above the others. For example the Basques are different from the Castillians. The Castillians are different from the Galicians. The Galicians are different from the Catalans, and so on.

One Common Bond

The Catholic Church has been their one great common bond through the centuries. Destroy the Church the Reds figure, and their task of Sovietizing Spain will be assured.

The second reason why the Spanish Reds hate the Catholic Church is that atheism is the basis of their materialistic Marxism their guiding political philosophy. In profaning churches and assaulting believers in God the Reds are only carrying out their obligations as professed Marxists.

The Spanish Nationalists, on the other hand, are fighting to preserve religion. Theirs is not solely a religious war as many believe. It is more than that. Theirs is a fight to save Spanish civilization itself, which the Marxists, would Sovietize and destroy. That is the real significance of the Spanish Civil War to the world at large.

To American Catholics the conflict in Spain is of the utmost importance for two reasons.

To American Catholics the conflict in Spain is of the utmost importance for two reasons.

The first is, briefly, that the forces of bigotry and intolerance in the United States are using the Spanish Civil War as a pretext for attacking Catholicism in general.

It is regrettable, but true, that many non-radical American non-Catholic clergymen who are affiliated with Spanish Red-aiding groups throughout the country. These groups, almost without exception, are communist organized and controlled. In addition they are principally fund-raising and propaganda agencies for American Reds as well.

Interest of U. S. Catholics

American Catholics should be interested in Spain for this other reason: for years after the present conflict is over, and regardless of who wins, they will be forced to refight its issues again and again in the United States. Communists and other radicals will emphasize Spain for a considerable period So long as it will be possible to collect one cent for the party chest, or to gain one sympathizer, the "comrades" will keep the subject of Spain very much alive.

One of the principal ways they will do this is little appreciated now by Catholics It is by means of veterans of the Lincoln-Washington Brigades, composed of men from the United States, many not even citizens, who fought with the Spanish Red Army Virtually all of these veterans are radicals Scores of them already are earning a comfortable living as propagandists on Spain, trained and paid by the Communist Party. Most are still in their twenties and are good for many years of this type of activity.

Both reasons are of grave concern to thinking American Catholics.

For invariably the Catholic Church is assailed time and again by these bigots and paid propagandists in their "lectures" and other activities. It is a well known propaganda axiom of Moscow and Berlin that if a lie is repeated often enough it is bound to be believed by many otherwise sincere people. The lies and distortion of Marxist propagandists are responsible for most of the bitterness and misunderstanding throughout the world on the Spanish Civil War.

This is what will happen in the United States. American Catholics will be humiliated, their religion scurrilously attacked as long as one of these bigots or Lincoln-Washington Brigade propagandists is active And rest assured there will be many active for some time. This situation will prevail as long as Catholics fail to clarify the issues of the Spanish Civil War.

Barred from Red Spain

In an effort to help them do this these correspondents went to Spain at their own expense, determined to learn the truth and tell it without fear or favor. To be as objective as possible they would have liked to have spent at least six weeks in Red Spain. They were prepared to do so. The Barcelona Government, however, refused necessary permission.

Nationalist officials showed the writers every consideration. They acted on the assumption that "the truth neither fears nor offends." Permission was readily granted for those correspondents to come and go as they pleased. The only restrictions were common-sense ones, designed to safeguard them at the front. Only twice in six weeks were the writers stopped and asked to show their "salvo vonductos" or safe conduct passes. Each time was on a lonely road by civil guards who had orders to halt all travellers to prevent spies from seeping through.

Illustrative of the great freedom permitted these correspondents by Nationalist officials was that one of the writers was allowed to take 3,000 feet of motion picture film. There was not even the slightest interference or objection by officials as to subject matter or details. Most remarkable of all for a country at war the film was permitted to be taken out of Spain without being censored.

Visited Many Fronts

While in Nationalist Spain these correspondents visited the Catalonian, Valencia, Teruel, Toledo and Madrid fronts, and the following cities: Irun, San Sebastian, Burgos, Saragossa, Castellon, Lerida, Belchite, Madrid, Santander, Val-
