Facts and News about YOUR NATIONAL CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY

To educate those "to whom the administration of social affairs and the guidance of social thought or the amelioration of social evils is to be entrusted" was the aim of the School of Social Science at The Catholic University of America in Washington, D. C., when it first prospectus was issued.

Considered "new" by those now associated with the University, the school was an important unit in the University as early as 1905. Its work was diverted into other channels until the summer of 1937 when the Rev. Joseph Corrigan, Rector of the University, announced its re-establishment at the particular insistence of the Holy Father.
