Well, enjoy your vacation to the fullest, boys and girls because in my role of crepe hanging this morning I might remind you that those peaky old examinations are not far off.

You know, I planned to shout my head off this morning about all those schools who reported on their sale of Christmas seals.

Faith Stories For Little Ones

We read in the history of the Church that the early Christians were persecuted by those monsters of cruelty and wickedness, the emperors of Rome.

Though so numerous as Tertullian remarks as to fill the towns, the cities, the camp, the Senate and the Forum, they preferred to suffer patiently the most barbarous tortures and death itself, rather than renounce their faith.

The Theban Legion. In the army of the Emperor Maximus was a company of six thousand Christians, who, from having been living in the neighborhood of Thebes, a city of Upper Egypt, were named the Theban Legion.

At that time the army was encamped near the banks of the lake of Geneva, but on receiving the Emperor's message, the Theban Legion, under the command of St. Maurice, withdrew to the foot of the mountain now known by the name of Mt. St. Bernard.

An order soon arrived from the Emperor that they should take part in some public sacrifices, under pain of being decimated; but they refused with one voice that they would never give assent to idols, or imbibe their hands in the blood of their fellow-Christians.

Being a third time summoned to comply with the Emperor's order, St. Maurice, in the name of the Lord, refused the emperor's order, and was succeeded by a fresh decimation.

Some were trampled down by the cavalry, some were hung on trees, and shot with arrows, some were killed with the sword, and St. Maurice, with the other officers of the legion, was beheaded.
