Around The World

FUNCTIONS DURING WAR
London.—The Collegio Bede, of Rome, will continue its work in England during the war. It is announced by the rector, the Rev. Fr. C. L. Duchemin. Students have been informed that the college will re-open on October 16, at St. Joseph's College, Upholland, in the Liverpool Archdiocese. In making the announcement, Monsignor Duchemin said the arrangement "will provide an opportunity for men who are not otherwise called to serve their country of pursuing their studies for the priesthood in order to supply the great need that there will be for priests in a few years' time."

CHECK AFTER AIR RAIDS
London.—Priests in the Westminster Archdiocese will make a tour of usually clearing stations in their parishes when the "all clear" signal is heard. Soon after an air raid, an instruction which has been sent out by His Eminence Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, Archbishop of Westminster, Hall of Lambeth, within the Westminster Archdiocese. When an air raid alarm has been sounded the priests are instructed to go to a hospital, if possible.

Catholics in this diocese have been asked to wear badges, either on the coat or under the lapel to show their affiliation. Special badges with a cross and the letters "C.C." prominently displayed are on sale at the church book stores. Round the central design is the legend "In case of injury call a Catholic Priest."

MONARCH CATHOLIC
The Queen's birthday of Queen Wilhelmina brought distinction to several Catholics of Holland. Named Knights of the Order of the Lion of the Netherlands were former Minister of Justice, C.N.J.F. Goessling, former Minister of Social Affairs, G.P.M. Romm, Monsignor F.A.M. van Welie and Dr. A.B.M. Brandama, professors at the Catholic University of Nijmegen, and Prof. H. A. Kaar, of the Catholic Theological College of Tilburg. The Most Rev. Eugene van Beckum, Auxiliary Bishop of Utrecht, was named Grand Officer of the Order of Orange-Nassau; the Rev. Dr. F.J.M. Van Gils, of Rotterdam, a Commander of the same order; and Mlle. I. Spel, president of the Dutch League of Women, was decorated with the same order.

URGENT PRESIDENCY
Cape-town.—The first head of a foreign state ever to visit the Union of South Africa, General Carmona, President of Portugal, received a warm welcome from the Catholic community. The General and his staff attended Mass in Pretoria. Bishop David O'Leary, O.M.I., who officiated, said in his address that it was fitting that the first head of a State to visit South Africa should be the President of Portugal, for it was Portuguese navigators who discovered this land. "It is also fitting," he added, "that the head of that State should be a Catholic, for those same navigators were the first to plant the cross of Christianity in South African soil."

'CALVARY OF PEACE'
Felix.—On the most advanced point of French soil extending out into the sea facing Great Britain a "Calvary of Peace" has been erected. At the point, between Boulogne and Calais, there is an abandoned mill 600 years old. Against its tower, facing the sea, has been erected a monumental Christ, weighing, with the cross, three tons.

AIDS REFUGEES
Valencia City.—His Excellency the Most Rev. Filippo Cortesi, Apostolic Nuncio to Poland, is present in Bucharest, Rumania, according to word received here. Archbishop Cortesi is working for the religious and moral assistance of the Polish refugees, and, as the Nuncio in this is tending them material aid as well.

'Full Confession' Film Made With Catholic Supervision
Ambient Catholic churchmen combined to authenticate the elaborate "saunter mass" sequences which form the colorful religious place of resistance of RKO Radio's "Full Confession," now showing at the Century.

The Rev. Orlan E. Cook, especially appointed by Archbishop J. Cantwell to Southern California, was technical director. In addition to supervising mass, altar, wedding and church arrangements generally, Father Cook tutored and prompted Joseph Calleia in his role of the slandering priest, Father Loma. Richard Keys Biggs, nationally known concert-organist and Gregorian composer, directed the boys' choir from the Blessed Sacrament Church in Hollywood.

Working closely with these two was John Farrow, the director, who is considered an authority on theology. His wife was Pope Pius XI, with the title of Commander of the Holy Sepulchre.

'Father' Title, God's Right, Says Dr. Russell

NEW YORK.—"Being the Creator of each person's soul, God has the right to be called 'Father' and 'we belong to Him more than to our parents," declared the Rev. Dr. William H. Russell Sunday night in his address on the "Catholic Hour," on "God Our Father." Saying that the implication behind the words, "our Father, is that every human person has God for Father," Dr. Russell said this paternity is natural and supernatural. "God has a startling reality to teach," he added, "namely, that men may actually live in two worlds. This reality called supernatural life is both before and after baptism. It is at that moment that God adopts the child and becomes his Father in the supernatural order. Baptism, its elevation into another world, is both incorporation into Christ as the Head of re-established humanity, and adoption by God. That is why baptism is called a rebirth, a birth from above."

"One is overcome with joy," Dr. Russell went on, "when he realizes that after baptism he may call God his Father and that he has a right to be inheritant. After baptism one need never be lonely, for he belongs to the household of God. God is his Father now, not only in the natural order, but also in the supernatural order."

Continuing, Dr. Russell said the Mass "grasps us only when we have grasped the love that is bound up in that word, Father. To know God as our Father is to be in the need of the Mass; for Catholics go to Mass to render homage to their Father."

"Yes, God is our Father," he declared. "And the Mass is important because it is the most fitting tribute that we can offer to Him. God does not need anything. But we need to express what we think of God as our Father. We need to live with Him. And when a Catholic wishes to do something fine for God he simply gives Him the Mass. In other words, sacrifice is our means of worshipping God."

Thousands at Mass in Former Spain Jails, Stained by Martyrs' Blood
By REV. MANUEL GRANA MADRID.—A jail converted into a church, where 30,000 persons attended Mass, is a current thing in Spain, where services are held in every available place in the mountains and in the fields, in the gardens and public squares, and among the ruins of old mansions. The old Madrid prison has been stained by the blood of many Christians, and perhaps there is no church in Spain that contains the relics of so many martyrs. There has been commemorated the third anniversary of the shootings which took place in August, 1936, and in which many priests, professors, writers, and other prominent men were slain by Red soldiers.

Recently an altar and "cross of the father" were set up in the large central courtyard. Mass was celebrated there. The celebrant, Father Palomares, one of the survivors of the tragedy there recalled it most realistically in his sermon.

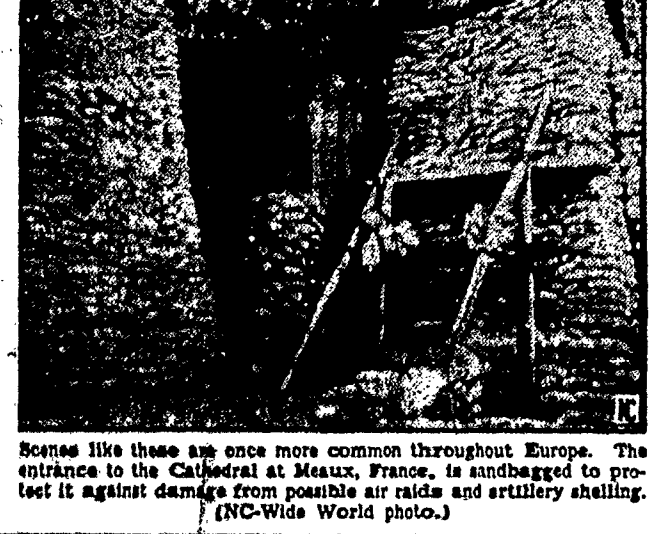

The journalists of Madrid also set aside a day in honor of their deceased colleagues. Members of all the press groups went to the cemetery and, led by the Bishop of Madrid, prayed before the tomb of D. Alfonso Rodriguez Santamaria, former President of the Press Association. Then they proceeded to the cemetery chapel, where Mass was celebrated.

Later the Bishop blessed the graves, among them that of his friend, D. Rufino Blanco, prominent journalist and one of the most brilliant teachers in Spain.

Sandbags and a Cathedral

Scenes like these are once more common throughout Europe. The entrance to the Cathedral at Meaux, France, is sandbagged to protect it against damage from possible air raids and artillery shelling. (NC-Wide World photo.)

Europe's People Against War

SAN ANTONIO.—All peoples of Europe even the most belated nations, including Germany itself, are definitely opposed to the current war, according to the Very Rev. Walter F. Golatta, S.M., President of St. Mary's University here, who has just returned from Europe.

Father Golatta further asserts that France and England, though very much in opposition, possibly more than any other nations, are determined to cling steadfastly to their principles and policies.

"At least 70 per cent of the German people are not in sympathy with Hitler," he said. "The German people do not want war but they are afraid to speak in opposition to Hitler."

From the numerous conversations which Father Golatta had with many educated Germans he readily perceived that the populace of Germany does not condone Hitler's actions and tactics. Presumably they are executing his commands and outwardly giving evidence of their allegiance to Hitler because they want to but because they have been terribly intimidated, he said.

In addition to being held in subjection the people are kept in ignorance as to what secret diplomatic moves the government is negotiating with other countries, he remarked.

At present there exists little possibility of revolt by the German people, despite their distaste for Hitler and his government, Father Golatta said. Thus, the university here, who has just returned from Europe.

Auto Show To Open Saturday, October 14

The 32nd Annual Auto Show, which opens at Edgemoor Park in Rochester Saturday, will be a wide departure from the ordinary type of automobile display.

It will comprise not only a mammoth exhibition of the latest 1940 models of all leading American makes of cars but also an elaborate Fashion Show staged by the J. E. Thompson Company, nightly music by two of Rochester's leading bands and a host of popular radio acts and personalities.

The dates of this year's show, October 14 to 21, are the earliest ever. The opening date precedes that of any other Auto Show in the country. The opening ceremony in the National Automobile Show in New York City by 24 hours.

WHAM Presents Bradley Kincaid

It is with a great deal of pride that WHAM can announce the presence in Rochester of the Boy from the Mountains, Bradley Kincaid. Known throughout the land for several years, his appearance over WHAM is a decided addition to our morning schedule. Known as an early bird his local time is the earliest possible. Yes, folks, get out of the covers early morning at 6:30, turn on that set at 11:00 and you will hear a half-hour of song and chatter. Just so you will have an idea what he looks like, we present below a more or less authentic likeness of a swell guy and then a bit of chatter about him, just as if you didn't know him already.

BRADLEY KINCAID

The expression "Keep Cheerful" has become the family byword in thousands and thousands of homes throughout the United States and Canada, because Bradley Kincaid, NBC star, has for almost a decade, closed his radio program with this philosophy of life. Bradley Kincaid is himself a living example of this cheerful philosophy and everyone who meets him is immediately impressed with his spirit of friendliness.

One of the things that characterizes Bradley Kincaid, the Mountain Boy (and it is this that is responsible for his great and ever increasing popularity) is his genuineness. Born of sturdy Scotch ancestors, Bradley early learned to take a person at his word and not what he appeared to be on the surface. He is a great student of human nature and has an uncanny sense of what is real and what is sham or "front." He believes that life would not be worth living if one lost faith in his fellow man. "The average person," says Bradley, "wants to do the right thing, but sometimes the very nature of his work causes him to go astray. My philosophy is to give every man I meet credit for being honest and square until he proves himself otherwise."

Bradley Kincaid was the first singer on the air with mountain ballads and folk songs as such. Bradley has built his popularity on the fact that he sings only the best and the most authentic of the mountain ballads, and he refuses to clutter up his program with any of the so-called "hill-billy" songs that are often referred to as mountain songs by people who don't know the vast difference between the two types of songs. "Mountain ballads," says Bradley, "are songs that have been handed down by word of mouth for many generations, traditional songs, in other words, characteristic folk songs. The hill-billy songs are, for the most part, jall songs and bum songs that were written in New York or Chicago for purely commercial purposes, whereas, the mountain songs were never written down and were passed on from one singer to another. Bradley Kincaid has perhaps received more gifts from radio listeners than anyone else in radio. Among his many choice gifts he lists nineteen handmade quilts, some of them made by old ladies, seventy-five or eighty years old, who claim Bradley and his family as their own. During the maple sugar season, Bradley receives enough maple sugar to furnish maple syrup for the Kincaid tribe throughout the year.

Perhaps the greatest reason for Bradley Kincaid's success is his "girl friend" Irma, who has been Mrs. Bradley for twelve years. "She has been a constant source of help and inspiration ever since I met her," says Bradley, "and I am sure that whatever popularity or success I have attained I owe to her." To be happily married is just about the biggest thing in life, and I don't believe that there is a happier married couple in radio or anywhere else that we are, despite the fact that some rumor has had us separated a number of times."

When Bradley Kincaid's twin daughters were born (they are now 9 years old) they received enough baby clothes to last them two years, and Bradley says they still have a cedar chest full of things that they never get around to wear before they outgrow them.
