SOCIAL JUSTICE MEMBERS OPPOSE N. A. B. RULING

Members of the Social Justice Club adopted a resolution at their regular meeting October 16 protesting vigorously to the ruling of the National Association of Broadcasters in regards to Father Coughlin.

Approximately 600 members heard the Rev. Henry Laudenbach, M. I., of Buffalo, the guest speaker, voice the protest of the Social Justice Club. "Father Coughlin," he said, "has been threatened with being cut off the air so many times that we are getting used to it. Many people do not like him but on the other hand many many more do like him. It is well to remember that even though much is said about what Father Coughlin says and writes, never has one word been said against his character."

Bernard Florack, vice president of the Social Justice Club in Rochester, pointed out that the great American principle of freedom of speech is now at stake. It is not the question of Father Coughlin alone, but the question of freedom of speech in America.

It was proposed to organize a Committee for the Defense of Freedom of Speech.

Erection of Washington Archdiocese Creates Unique Situation In U. S.

WASHINGTON—(N. C.)—Erection of this city as a new Archdiocese, equal in rank with the Archdiocese of Baltimore and both Sees under the direction of the same Archbishop, creates a situation unique in the history of the Catholic Church in the United States and rare, at least, in the history of the Church throughout the world.

The action of the Holy See sets up two Archdioceses on an equal footing where only one existed before, and centers them in the person of the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington. By driving across the Maryland-District of Columbia boundary line, Archbishop Curley now leaves one Archdiocese of which he is Ordinary and enters instantly into another which is under his jurisdiction.

There is and has been no exact parallel to this situation in the history of the Church in this country, said the Rev. Dr. Joseph B. Code of the Catholic University of America, who has just completed the "Dictionary of the American Hierarchy." "As far as I know," Dr. Code added, "there is no exact parallel anywhere in the world."

Archbishop's 60th Birthday It is interesting that the Holy See's announcement came on Archbishop Curley's sixtieth birthday, and at a time when plans are going forward for the formal observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the American Hierarchy here on Friday, November 17. Archbishop Curley is a successor of Archbishop John Carroll, the first Bishop of the Hierarchy of the United States.

Archbishop Curley will be formally installed as Archbishop of Washington, but the date for the ceremony, which will take place in St. Matthew's Cathedral, has not yet been fixed. Canon Law requires that an Archbishop Pontifical in his Cathedral at least once a year.

The Catholic Review, official newspaper of the Archdiocese of Baltimore, will be the official newspaper of the Archdiocese of Washington. It was announced in Baltimore.

Attention has been called to the fact that Archbishop Curley now occupies several important offices: Archbishop of Baltimore and Metropolitan of the Ecclesiastical Province of Baltimore, Archbishop of Washington and Chancellor of the Catholic University of America, which is situated within the Archdiocese of Washington.

St. Matthew's Cathedral parish is preparing for the observance of its one hundredth anniversary next year. The parish was founded in 1840, and the Cathedral is the second church erected by the parish. The cornerstone of the present impressive structure was laid in 1853, and the transept was finished in 1897. The nave was not finished until 1904.

St. Matthew's had within its boundaries for years many of the foreign embassies and legations in the National Capital. A considerable number of these foreign missions have moved farther out toward the city's suburbs but a great number of the diplomats still attend St. Matthew's Cathedral.

Sovietize Poland Is Chief Aim of Russia

COPENHAGEN—Reports of the "liquidation" of a large number of Catholic and Greek Orthodox priests by Soviet troops when they marched into Poland are published in the Moscow newspaper Pravda, organ of the Russian Godless Association.

The newspaper contains several articles bitterly attacking priests in the region seized by Russia, accusing them of espionage. One story praised a Red soldier who, it said, threw several hand grenades into a group of Polish priests and officers who had refused to surrender, killing all of them.
