Reports from the war zones sound like a couple of gossip's utterances over the back yard fence. They say the British did that. They say the Nazis did that. Propaganda by the air-mail and newspaper-full. However, better that, than an accurate report on thousands and even million young men of Europe slaughtered for what?

Communion breakfasts, because of their recurrence, may not appeal to all laymen and laywomen as they should. The practice of receiving Holy Communion in a body and assembling later for a breaking of the fast and good fellowship with fellow parishioners or fellow organization members is something to be desired but which cannot adequately be described in cold type...

Why stop there? Let's go back to the days of Adam. The first man was made to the image and likeness of God, says the first book in the Bible. If man is made to the image of God, there must be something in man that is sacrosanct and inviolable like God. God created man and breathed into him the breath of life. With that breath came man's soul, and with the soul intellectual and spiritual freedom. With the soul came conscience. No man, no king, no dictator has a right to violate the conscience of another.

Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, were asking to honor City Judge Frederick J. McNamee, newly named Master of the Fifth District, Fourth Degree, at a dinner in Columbus Civic Centre.

Evidently the doctrine carries us pretty far. And the only philosophy for if you prefer theology that gives a solid substantial irrefragable basis for the doctrine of the Rights of Man is the Catholic Philosophy. The doctrine of the inalienable Rights of Man is "papist" surely enough. (Copyright, 1939, N.C.W.C.)
