FOR THE MISSIONABLES AND THEIR CO-WORKERS

If one reflects ever so little upon the world-encompassing task entrusted to the Church by Her Founder, namely the conversion of the entire human race, he will appreciate better the indispensable role of the missionaries and their co-workers, as well as the Church's tender care of them and constant pleading for prayers in their behalf. Theirs is no earthly mission. They have dedicated their lives for one purpose only to make men know and love Christ.

It was the humble Band of Twelve which constituted the nucleus of the mission apostolate of the Catholic Church. To them the divine Command, "Going, therefore, teach ye all nations' was first uttered, together with the consoling promise, "Behold, I am with you all days even to the consummation of the world." In the lifetime of these first missionaries, the doctrines of the new Teacher were carried beyond the limits of the great Ro-man Empire, even as the shadow of His Cross fell heavily upon cach of them along the way. Like their Leader, persecution persecution and martyrdom awaited. None escaped death by force but the chaste and gontle John who severed as the from John, who smerged safely from the end prepared for him When Christianity became a mighty force within the Roman Empire the successors of the original Twelve extended their mission apostolate to the peoples outside that empire, and hardy warriors of the various tribes were taught the sweet lessons of faith, hope and charity We know that the sons of the mighty Dominic and the humble Francis treking the overland route to Cathay carried the standards of the Cross to what is today Turkestan, Inner Mongolia and intropid Francis Xavier added another glowing page in mis-sion history and the Church entered upon a new apostolic period.

With the erm of exploration, our own land felt the first warm breath of Christianity as Catholic missionaries, fired not by the lust for gold or conquest, came to work among and for the abor-gines of America. During the succeeding centuries we know that men and women have continued to perform that most "aignal charity" of which Pope Pius XI wrote Leaving their homeland and their loved ones they nave carried the story of Christ and Christ crucified to the vast regions of the north, through uncharted seas to the lands of across trackless forests and nungles to the great areas of the south No intropid mariner no fearless explorer could outdo courage the heroism of thet'ath. olic missionary who faced the unknown and the hostile with but one weapon, the slender staff of charity On the other hand none outrank him in the diversity of service nor in the quality of unheralded achievement Today, sons and daughters of America are among those who are carrying out the divine mandate among all nations and per-haps it will be this bond of blood will inspire our prayers iuring March in behalf of the pings have been multiplied you missionaries of the Catholic can easily find a spot for these during March in behalf of the
