According To The Doctor

Ivy poisoning is not a pleasant aftermath of a hike, picnic or golf party. Poisoning results from touching the plant or coming in contact with the clothing, shoes, golf clubs, and the like, which themselves have been contaminated with the sticky juice. Axes and knives used in cutting the branches may be a source of contamination. It is only the sap from cut or crushed parts of the poison ivy plants that cause the trouble, so merely being in the presence of this plant need give no cause for alarm.
