L. C. B. A. Makes Golden Jubilee Plans

Observance In Rochester Set Oct. 29

To mark in a fitting manner the Golden Jubilee of the Ladies' Catholic Benevolent Association, Rochester Branches of the society are planning a celebration for Tuesday, Oct. 29.

This nation-wide organization of Catholic women was founded in Titusville, Pa., in 1890.

A Solemn Pontifical Mass at Sacred Heart Pro-Cathedral with His Excellency, the Most Rev. James E. Kearney, Bishop of Rochester, officiating, assisted by the spiritual advisers of the various branches, will open the celebration on October 29.

Climaxing the day it is planned to hold a dinner at Powers Hotel at which the Bishop and Priests will be guests of the Association. Mrs. Anna Ryan is president of the Rochester Advisory Senate and a Supreme Trustee. She will be chairman of "Rochester Day," assisted by Mrs. Rose Creston.

Recall Founders

In a statement on the forthcoming Golden Jubilee observance, the Rochester committee recalls the beginnings of the order and the progress achieved here by the late Mrs. Cora McParlin, former Supreme Trustee and leader of the Rochester Advisory Senate for many years. The statement declares:

"Fifty years ago the order came into existence in a little town near Erie, Pa. When the formal organization was completed at Titusville, Pa., an Erie woman, Mrs. Joanna A Royer, was chosen as Supreme Recorder. From her home went out the first message that a new venture had been undertaken for the protection of home and loved ones. That venture was the Ladies' Catholic Benevolent Association now in its Golden Jubilee year.

"With such a history as a background it was fitting that an enthusiastic, happy group should come from far and near to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the association.

"Supreme President Miss Kate Mahoney of Troy and other Supreme Officers are expected to attend as well as members of the different branches in the Rochester area including Auburn, Seneca Falls and Geneva.

"The Rochester branches owe the strength of their numbers to the untiring efforts of the late Mrs. Cora McParlin who was Supreme Trustee of the order for many years. In recognition of her work among Catholic organizations she received the Papal Cross 'Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice' in 1932. She passed to her eternal reward in 1935 but her personal qualities and great leadership will remain in the memory of L. C. B. A. women forever."

Nun-Jubilarian Spent 30 Years Among Sioux

ALLIANCE, Nebr.—"Great Mother" of the Sioux Indians, Sister Mary Norberta, is this week celebrating her thirtieth anniversary as a nun at St. Joseph's Hospital here, where Sister Norberta is recovering from a long illness. A Mass was said in the hospital chapel.

Dr. Francis A Howard, of Glendale, Calif., brother of the jubilarian, and his family spent several days with Sister Norberta.

Sister Norberta, 72 years old, has spent 30 of her 50 years in religion teaching the Sioux Indians of South Dakota. When she went to the Jesuit-organized St. Francis Mission in the Rosebud Indian Reservation about 1898 she was occupying one of the remote outposts of civilization among tribes which were still in their original barbaric state so much so that the first task which fell upon the mission was to instruct the Indians in the white man's mode of digging graves for proper burial of their dead.

New India Diocese

Bangalore.—Recent developments in the State of Mysore have made necessary re-distribution of the territories of the Dioceses of Mysore and Coimbatore and the erection of a new diocese with its seat in this city, which has recently gained considerable importance as the residence of the Apostolic Delegate to India, Burmah and Ceylon.

The Missions need help.

Youth Goes On Retreat At 8 Prince St.

By MARGARET B. GERALD

Privileged to look on, while approximately one hundred girls from Elmira, Rochester and surrounding towns made the closed retreat last week at Sacred Heart Convent, 8 Prince Street, we marveled that the flower of our Catholic girlhood could pause and for a few days, turn their back on the world and its pleasures.

Modern writers and speakers bemoan the fickleness of youth, enlarge upon the instability of adolescents and urge parents to use the pagan methods of psychiatry and psychoanalysis, in guiding their children. They could have learned much that would have astonished them—had they visited the Convent of the Sacred Heart during those days of the retreat.

Those young girls, many of whom will be our Catholic mothers of the future, proved beyond a doubt that "the swing of 1940" the lure of fashions and the call of the world could give place to a spiritual inventory Termed popular, many of them labeled as leaders of their set, we found them able to separate the debits from the credits, interested in knowing that they were made to love, honor and obey God. Here and there, a retreatant remembering the advice of worldly persons, was surprised to learn that one can be of the world and yet apart from it.

From the lips of the Rev Harold Pfeiffer SJ. of Buffalo came the challenge that God made each one of them to know Him, to love Him and to serve Him. Sometimes a puzzled look would cross the face of a young girl here and there in the little chapel, as she mentally compared Father Pfeiffer's words with the teachings of the cynics. His voice—spoke—clearly and distinctly, each word filled with meaning and told a story, which for the first time, struck with its full significance, on the ears and hearts of his listeners.

Attention Individed

Down through the ages with the unfaltering steps of youth—they followed their retreat master—with unwavering attention during four conferences each day.

"God made you for His greater Honor and glory.

"God created the first being, gave life to something that had not existed before—Everything in the world is good unless it is used by man in committing sin. God long before he made man created the angels, couthless, beautiful spirits of a higher order than mortal man. Lucifer, their leader, sharper in mind and intellect than the others, cried out 'I will not serve'—He lost everything because of a mortal sin of thought."

An old story, you are saying, and serious facts for youth. Old, we grant you, serious also—but ever, true and not as serious as the problems your world gives to our youth in 1940.

And so the retreatants learned also about mortal sin. Absent were the lurid terms, by which adults must sometimes be awakened, but

We quote from a letter received from Hon. James M Mead of the United States Senate:

"I wish to assure you of my efforts to exempt clergymen, brothers and seminarians from the provisions of the Selective Military Training Bill."

We quote also from a letter received from Hon Robert F Wagner, U. S. Senator:

"I was happy to support the amendment to the Burke-Wadsworth Bill adopted by the Senate on August 20 which provides that 'The regular or duly ordained ministers of religion and students who are preparing for the ministry in theological or divinity schools recognized as such for more than one year prior to the date of enactment of this act, shall be exempt from training and service (but not from registration) under this act.'"

One of the outstanding activities of the Department of Social Action of the National Catholic Welfare Conference is the series of regional Conferences on Industrial Problems held successively in various parts of the country. These afford an occasion for representatives of capital and labor to discuss their mutual problems, and to hear from authoritative sources the Catholic view on industrial relations.

As one of these regional Conferences will be held in Rochester on September 23 and 24, immediately preceding our N. C. C. W. Diocesan Convention, we urge as many as possible of our out-of-town members to attend both the Conference and our Convention.

As the Convention draws near, we will pass in review some of the articles of the Constitution and By-laws of the Rochester Diocesan Council, N. C. C. W.

Games For Your Auto Trip

By LOIE BRANDOM

They had been on the road about a couple of hours when Betty and Billy began to show signs of restlessness.

"Wish we'd stayed at home," Billy remarked ominously.

"We'd be playin' games if we had stayed at home," Betty answered, following her twin brother's lead, as usual.

The faces of the other children immediately became gloomy.

Mother smiled and remarked brightly, "I've been thinking!"

"What?" demanded Betty; and all the children were at once wide awake with interest. For when Mother said, "I've been thinking!" something nice was sure to happen.

"I've been thinking that games do not have to be played in any special places," Mother continued. "We can play just as nice games right here in the car as anywhere else, only they will not be quite the same kind of games."

"What kind of games will they be? Of course we can't play running and jumping games," Billy reasoned.

"Oh, no!" Mother laughed. "But we have a chance to think up some new ones that we do not play at home. Now take this one for instance:" and she opened her pocketbook and handed each of the children a Lincoln-head penny. "Now see who can be the first to find the answers to the questions I shall ask. While Uncle Ned is driving, Daddy, you act as scorekeeper and judge for us, please. Is everyone ready? All right! Here is the first question: Can you find the name of a song?

"America," answers Betty promptly. "We sing it in school."

"That is fine," praised Mother, "now here is the next one." And a whole hour flew by while they were hunting the answers to the following:

A foreign fruit.....Date
Something that grows on a stalf of corn.....Ear
A small wild animal....Hare (hair)
A spring flower.....Tulips (2 lips)
A Chinese beverage.....Tea (T)
Something a potato has.....Eye
A messenger.....One sent (1 cent)
Where ships travel.....Sea (C)
A famous statue.....Liberty
A number.....One

A large cookie was the prize awarded the winner of this game, while smaller cookies were given as "bonbie" prizes to the other players.

Color-color was the name of the next game played. The child making the lowest score in the first game was allowed to start the next. He asked all the other players to hide their eyes so that he could look around and choose the colors of some object they could all see without moving from their seats.

"Green and gold," he announced promptly.

They all looked and looked but it was several minutes before Sue noticed the gold ring with the green stone that Mother was wearing. It was then Sue's turn to choose the colors of the next object to be guessed. As honors were about evenly divided in this game, no awards were made.

When they stopped for lunch, Daddy took square pieces of paper and made each of them a pinwheel which he fastened to sheet [illegible] of cardboard. When they were again on the road they could hold these in the breeze and watch them spin.

In the afternoon they played the game pack-up. Betty started the game by saying, "I packed my trunk and in it I put an artist's." Bill was next and he said "I packed my trunk and in it I put an artist's album." The game progressed in this manner, each one putting in, according to alphabetical order, the oddest things of which he could think, and remembering and repeating also, each time, everything that had gone into the trunk before.

After this game, Mother handed each one an apple and before they ate them, each child guessed how many seeds there would be in his apple. They saved each seed, and then at the end each checked the whole number of seeds found in his apple with the number he had guessed.

As the journey ended, all agreed it had been a very short and pleasant day.
