en in the other Americas," and promised to seek an exchange of Catholic Action publications.

Hearts Must Not Be Hardened

Directly on the subject of Peace, the Council noted the Government's undertaking to defend this country against both war and "infection by the totalitarian philosophy," but pleaded that hearts should not be hardened against the peoples scourged by war, and that preparation be made to "influence worthily the peace that must come." Expressing "support to the fullest" for "all measures for national defense," the Council at the same time promised to study so that the coming peace may be "just and charitable to all," and urged the Government to direct its policy toward the winning of such aims. It then cited and endorsed the Holy Father's guides for peace, in the following terms:

"1. The right to life and independence of all nations. When this equality of rights has been disturbed, it must be restored by the standards of justice and equity.

"2. Disarmament generally accepted.

"3. International institutions must be created or reconstituted, with adequate provision for the faithful application of peace agreements, and when needed, for the revision of these terms.

"4. The real needs and just demands of nations and peoples, as well as of ethical minorities; demands which, if not always sufficient to form a strict right when there are recognized or confirmed treaties or other juridical documents—which oppose them, deserve at all events benevolent examination to meet them in a peaceful way and where it appears necessary, by means of equitable, wise and harmonious revision of treaties.

"5. The supremacy of justice and charity in all."

Sane National Defense

Specifically on "National Defense," the Council recognized the need for a national defense program "to preserve our Democratic form of government," and also the need for cooperation of all in such a program, then pledged itself to the following:

"1. The protection of the American people from unwarranted sacrifices.

"2. The maintenance of moral standards conducive to the work and general welfare of the people.

"3. The promotion and preservation of requisite standards of health, nutrition, physical fitness and social well being.

"4. The defense of the Consumers' interests.

"5. Employment for the millions now unemployed."

The Council voted a "most cordial welcome" to the Inter-American Commission of Women for its Washington meeting, Nov. 11 to 13, noting that while the Commission seeks "fullest political and civil equality with men, and full opportunity for work," it also safeguards special legislation to protect women as mothers and "put them on a more nearly equal basis with men in the industrial field."

Expressing itself as "shocked and greatly disturbed" at the mounting evils of American family life, the Council called upon Christian mothers to "accept to the full the highly important obligations of their God-given calling." Recommendation was made that a conference of many interests be called to seek a solution of the unemployment problem.

Service School, Press

A "solemn pledge" was voted to collaborate in a plan for assured annual income for the National Catholic School of Social Service in Washington. In passing this strong resolution, the Council affirmed that today Catholic trained professional social workers, such as the School produces, "occupy a front line position in defense of the Christian foundations which constitute the stability and security of all social order."

The Catholic Press was applauded as a "stout bulwark in the defense of truth and the refutation of error," and was declared particularly needed today to counteract misinformation from biased sources. The Council called upon its members to give not only of their encouragement, but also their time, in assisting the spread of the Catholic Press, particularly in a year - round, sustained program rather than sporadic efforts.

In the field of Youth, the Council voted to place itself under the guidance of the Episcopal Committee on Youth; to promote a well-rounded program serving "the whole youth religiously, culturally, vocationally and recreationally," and to concentrate for the time being on intensive training of adult sponsors.

Other resolutions urged workers to prevail upon their leaders to heal the present split in the labor ranks; sought cooperation with manufacturers and retailers to the end that Christmas and Easter cards express Christian sentiments; again opposed the so-called "Equal Rights" amendment; prayed that the causes of beatification of the Venerable John Newman, once Bishop of Philadelphia, and of Mother Seton be brought to successful conclusion, and felicitated the Catholic University of America on its golden anniversary.

TO THE SACRED HEART

Oh Jesus, open wide Thy Heart
And let me enter in.
For weary is my stricken soul
Of sorrow and of sin.
I've sought for rest and found it not
In things of earthly mould;
Thy Heart alone can give me rest
And all my burdens hold.

ROCHESTER DIOCESAN COUNCIL

National Council of Catholic Women
Office: 536 Columbus Civic Centre, 50 Chestnut Street

CONVENTION NOTES OF SPECIAL INTEREST TO ROCHESTER

Our Rochester women delegates in attendance at the Twentieth National Convention of the N.C.C.W were among the more than 500 women from forty states, representing their organizations. Besides these there were many visitors who were not delegates.

It was generally agreed that this Convention surpassed all preceding ones, and our Rochester women were most enthusiastic

We were justly proud of Blanche Jennings Thompson at the reception in honor of Catholic authors on Saturday evening

On Sunday we assisted at the Pontifical Mass celebrated at the Cathedral of the Blessed Sacrament by Most Reverend Edward Mooney, our former bishop. He also welcomed the delegates at the Mass Meeting held in the Naval Armory that evening, and spoke at the closing banquet on Wednesday

Rev Leo C. Mooney, our Spiritual Director spent Monday at the Convention, and expressed his appreciation of what it meant to have over 500 at report meetings

Mrs M H Keogh, as one of the National Directors, had charge of the interesting exhibit featuring the work of the Chaplain's Aid Association.

Rochester was also honored in having Mrs Teresa Ganster representing New York Province on the Nominating Committee

Miss Helen Gurtler, while busy with Sodality matters, managed to attend the Sunday evening rally

Miss Cecilia Yawman our Diocesan President, Mrs Robert Hartman from the Catholic Women's Club, Mrs Chas W Mayer from the Catholic Women's Union, and Mrs Lawrence V Driscoll from the PTA of Sacred Heart Church, are home full of enthusiasm. Each one has had a different slant on Convention happenings

We will hear from them at our next Deanery Meeting

Lucille Ribson and Betty Welch Chairman of Publicity is Agnes O'Brien assisted by Rita Schneible and Marie Weidman.

Spaghetti lovers will be right at home at Nazareth College on Monday, Nov 11 when Il Circolo Dante, the Italian club of Nazareth will serve Italian cooked spaghetti to students, parents and friends Teresa Ricci president of the Italian club, will act as general chairman In charge of arrangements will be Josephine Gioia. Patricia Green and Helen Macchia Refreshments will be planned by Marguerite Bielle Ann Stehle, Lena Vernetti Catherine Meisenzahl, Irene Paolone, Helen Macchia while Santina Fazio, Alba Pronest Jean Dunigan and Suzanne Dupret will take care of the entertainment Gertrude DiPasquale Rita Povero and Grace Pronest will distribute the tickets and Lucy Argentieri, Angelico Morabito, Patricia Green and Edna Sorrendo will be the waitresses. Mildred Ball, Patricia Quinn, Margaret Volpe, Catherine Meisenzahl and Marion Fuher will decorate the dining room The publicity is being taken care of by Angelica Morabito, Rita Povero, Angelina Comfort and Irene Paolone.

Nazareth College in the News

By HELEN MACCHIA

Ade de Bothune of Newport, R I. Belgian artist craftsman and lecturer, spoke before the student body Oct. 30 on the Christian Philosophy of Work, a topic on which she has studied and written extensively. In her talk, she stressed the need of mercy toward humanity and also mentioned how the Catholic Worker has influenced her life. To the public she is best known for her woodcuts of the Saints printed in the Catholic Worker.

The Halloween party held Oct 30, was turned into a pledge party At the party, a sum donated by the student body, toward the College Drive was presented to the Dean. The chairman of this party was Alice Conheady Bonnie Gardner, representing a medieval lady received the award for the best costume. Two other awards were bestowed on Frances Hartigan and Patricia Hartigan who wore costumes representing a bookworm and a blind date respectively Patricia Doyle Rosemary Tierney and Marie Mueller represented the Three Black Crows. These were a few of the winners chosen by the Judges—Father Kelly, Sister Teresa Marie, Dean, and Mrs. Marion Ide In the course of the evening refreshments were served.

The Freshman Class will be honored by the Seniors of the College at a tea on Nov. 8 at the Peacock Room. The honorary chairman for this occasion will be Elizabeth Green; general chairman, Jean Toomey. In charge of arrangements will be Mildred Ball, Mary Jane Ward, Elizabeth George, Margaret McCann, Teresa Rico and Margurite Bielle. The invitations committee includes Amelia Weber, Marion Connor, Marjorie Anderson, Gertrude Skivington, Jane Meng and Mary Humphrey. Reception, Peg Lillich, Gert Hart, Helen Williams, Betty Sommers.

JANEY STANDS ALONE

By Lucia Mallory

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association, 8 West 40th Street, New York City. Three articles are appearing weekly in our columns.

"Lucia," telephoned Alice Loring. "I need to ask a favor of you It's about something that's tremendously important to Janey and me—"

Knowing Alice's tendency to over-devotion as a mother, I felt instinctively that I might prove to be a better friend if I refused her request. In that case it would be better to be talking face to face than by telephone. "Could you come over?" I asked.

"Why, yes," Alice agreed, "I can come for a few minutes before my next pupil arrives."

As I waited for my friend, I kept thinking about the slender, sober-faced little girl that had been, since her father's death three years before, her mother's constant companion. The two shared an intense love of music. At ten years of age, Janey had acquired a proficiency on the violin that made her playing constantly in demand. How many times I had watched the small musician, with rapt face bent above her violin, while her mother, at the piano, played a perfect accompaniment!

"I'll tell you what I want, Lucia," Alice began breathlessly. "Mr Barnes wants Janey to go with him to play a violin solo when he gives the Commencement address at Fairfield and he wants to take little Edna Dixon along as her accompanist. That child would just ruin Janey's solo. Do you suppose you could possibly drive over that evening and take me—I'd pay for the gas—"

"You don't need to go, Alice," I interrupted "Mr Barnes will take good care of Janey Anybody that's been superintendent of schools for twenty years knows how to take care of children."

"But you don't understand, Lucia," my friend answered tragically "Janey has never played without me! You know how I follow her every movement! Edna Dixon would be just another child playing a solo I'll have to find somebody else to take me!"

As Alice was turning away I decided that the time had come to tell her some of the things she needed to know

"Wait a minute, Alice" I urged "I wish you'd think the matter over carefully before you make the mistake of going with Janey"

"What do you mean—make a mistake?" Alice asked in a hurt voice. "I thought you liked to hear us play together."

"Indeed I do enjoy your playing," I hastened to assure her. "It's just that you won't always be with your daughter. The time must come for Janey to stand alone. Good mother that you are, Alice, you aren't giving the child a chance to prepare for that time."

"It isn't easy to say this," I went on, as my friend listened soberly "but I believe you and Janey would both be better off if part of the time, each of you had outside companionship."

"Lucia, do you really think I ought to let Edna play for Janey, even if it—spoils her solo?"

"The audience will be pleased to hear two such small children play," I told her. "They won't expect perfection."

"All right, Lucia, I'll call Mr. Barnes and tell him that Janey may play with Edna. I've been too much wrapped up in the child to think clearly about such things." Alice gave me a warm handclasp as she hurried away to the [illegible]

A few weeks later I heard the two children play together on a school program. Janey's mother sat beside me and shared the pleasure of the entire audience in the children's performance.

"I want to thank you for your suggestion, Lucia," she said. "It is good for Janey to stand alone."
