Amy LaVigne Hutchinson
Instructor in Effective Speech at RBI Demonstrates Voice Machine

Much of RBI's unusual success in Personality Development belongs to Mrs. Amy LaVigne Hutchinson who produces in her students the clear, pleasant speaking voice so essential in modern business offices of today. Records made of each student's voice reveal individual shortcomings. Special attention is then given to weak points, as well as training in posture, poise, enunciation, pronunciation, vocabulary building and interviews. This extra feature not R. B. I. illustrates the thoroughness with which R. B. I. trains young men and women for business careers.

Family Communion Sets New Record

of St. Patrick's Church, said the faithful responded wholeheartedly. He said he had been waiting, hoping that the Family Communion Sunday would be repeated this year.

Carrying out the Bishop's suggestion, families in great numbers thronged the downtown hotels and restaurants for breakfast following the Masses. The joy expressed in the countenances of father and children in being able to honor "mother" in this special manner was only exceeded by her happiness on the occasion.

Among the many beneficial results reported of the Family Communion Sunday, was that it had induced members of the family who had been lax in their duties to receive the Sacraments. The example given in all communities where families were seen leaving their homes together to attend church cannot be estimated but its effect in the communities is far-reaching, it is firmly believed.

HOBBIES AS VOCATIONAL TENDENCIES

By RUTH PECK McLEOD

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association, 8 West 40th Street, New York City. These articles are appearing weekly in our columns.

I'm going to be an astronomer when I grow up, and I've a collection of all kinds of maps and books on astronomy in my room. And I've a rock that's really a piece of a meteorite that fell on my grandfather's farm. My desk is full of all kinds of models of the planets that I made out of clay and baked. Mother lets me hang my maps on the wall so I can study the stars.

Of course I get interested in other subjects, too. I collect stamps and I have album after album full of United States and foreign ones, and envelopes full of odd ones I've bought, and then I've a box full of duplicates that I use for trading with the other boys. And my chum keeps several boxes of his over here because his mother won't let him have so much stuff around.

She says she's planned for him to be a lawyer, and he won't need stamps to prepare him for that profession. This friend of mine wants to be an archaeologist. He has an uncle who's in that work at the State University, and he started just that way, with stamp collecting. I'm glad my mother doesn't think all my hobbies and trophies are a nuisance that just litter up the house. Instead of her thinking I'm a bother, she encourages me in getting things like this.

Then sometimes I work with my chemistry set for hours. I did that after a great chemist lectured here at the High School. Dad's a chemist so he had him come to our house to dinner, and then Dad told him about my chemistry set, and that great scientist went down into our old basement to see what I'd been doing. And he complimented my mother and father on letting me have this "means of developing my talents," as he called it.

He said that his success was due to his mother who let him have any hobby he liked and let him collect specimens and do experiments in her old bluing bottles and things like that. He told us they didn't have chemistry sets in those days. He said he had five boys and that they were all different in what they liked to do, and he said that he was going to let each one be what he wanted to be. He said that hobbies always helped you to invent things and to "create." At first I didn't know just what he meant by "create," but he explained that he meant doing things you thought up yourself—you know, kind of carrying out your dreams.

Why, he was quite serious about boys' hobbies and collections and things like that. He said that very often hobbies prepare boys for their life work. You ought to have heard him running down the parents who make fun of their children's experiments.

I wish Sam Mitchell's mother could have heard him. Sam wants to be a scientist, and he's always experimenting with all kinds of things, but Mrs Mitchell throws away all the stuff he leaves lying around, for she says "The blessing of the house is order," but I can't see any "blessing" in destroying all his experiments. Why doesn't she give him a place to keep his things? Our science teacher says if Sam is encouraged he ought to make a name for himself if he does make a success, I think it'll be in spite of his mother. Of course she's crazy about him, but she's anxious for him to be a "financial success," she says, "like his father," who is the richest man in town. But she doesn't think "a lot of scientific experiments will bring him in many dollars."

And that great scientist even went next door to see the high school mechanic's son, Joe, making a miniature automobile, and said that someday the boy might invent something. And you could see that tickled the mechanic, and Joe, too, but it didn't please Joe's mother so well because she's always wanted him to have a white-collar job. She was afraid her boy might have to wear overalls like her husband. Now isn't that a crazy idea? Some women seem to think that their sons will be disgraced if they get a little grease on their hands.

We found out later that this great chemist had written a book on "Hobbies as Vocational Tendencies," and he is going to send Mother an autographed copy of it. Oh boy, I felt so full of ambition about my profession after he'd left! He had asked me all kinds of questions about which observatory I'd like to work in and never laughed at me like some people do when I tell them that I'm going to be an astronomer. His sons will all be great men because he never makes fun of them, and he told us his wife is a good housekeeper, but she doesn't object to boys having their things around, as long as they keep them in good order. That's just like my mother and dad.

Solace

By DOLOROS HOFFMAN

There is a green pasture in the desert of life
An oasis where one can find rest from the strife
Where the peace and quiet shut out every fear
And one is lost in His Presence so dear.

It's a place where a little light ruddly gleams
And a place from which living grace steadily streams
He listens with patience to each sorrow and ill
Then shows us how it was a part of His Will.

With His Sacred Hand He calms each emotional storm
And with eyes of faith we behold His sweet Form
Then all trouble and woe disappear like a charm
And we find solace in Him, Who keeps us from harm.

ROCHESTER DIOCESAN COUNCIL

National Council of Catholic Women
Office: 536 Columbus Civic Centre, 50 Chestnut Street

NEW EPISCOPAL CHAIRMAN FOR THE N. C. C. W.

The term of office of the Most Rev. Joseph F. Rummel, Episcopal Chairman of the Department of Lay Activities, National Catholic Welfare Conference of which the N. C. C. W. is a part, has expired and he is succeeded by the Most Rev. Francis C. Kelley, Bishop of Oklahoma City and Tulsa.

We quote from the Message of our National President, Mrs. J. W. McCollum:

—"Bishop Kelley, noted writer, leader, organizer, brings to the National Council, from the background of his own well-functioning Diocesan Council, a clear understanding of its possibilities and aims, with a hopeful vision of its future. Trustfully, enthusiastically, the Council may look forward to expert and kindly guidance from its new Episcopal Chairman.

"We are happy, too, that again we shall have an Assistant Episcopal Chairman, His Excellency, the Most Rev. Emmet M. Walsh, Bishop of Charleston, who since 1937 has given unstintingly of his time and devoted interest to National and Diocesan Councils.

"As we 'ring out the old; ring in the new' at the beginning of 1941 we think again of the great importance of leadership—of the rare privilege that is ours to follow. We thank God, devoutly, that active interest in the Council still abides in the hearts of our former Episcopal Chairmen—Their Excellencies, the Most Rev. Archbishop Schrembs of Cleveland, Bishop Noll of Fort Wayne and Archbishop Rummel of New Orleans.

"With the most grateful appreciation and heartiest New Year's greetings from the National Council of Catholic Women to all who have served as Episcopal Chairmen goes a loyal pledge of future endeavors and prayers, and may these works and prayers prove us worthy. These busy prelates have guided the Council as they have led their own people in their respective dioceses. This leadership and loyal following are the essence and inspiration of the National Council of Catholic Women, a small pattern of unity in the Mystical Body of Christ."
