A New Horse!

There is something gripping about the story of the new horse that goes to Merle Martz from President Willamson of the New York Central Railroad.

Mr. Willamson's answer soon was in Merle's hands: "I am going to see that you get a new horse, and hope that you will find not only that he is tame and nice, but also that you will have great joy in riding him."

Where so much that is mean and sordid, so much that is vicious and unworthy, is reported by our newspapers, it is pleasant to find an item such as this.

In Like A Lion Good old March is with us once more. A fine month, and well named after the god of war.

But even in itself March makes a strong appeal to those who live in our northern clime. There is a character about its bluster, an appeal to its chilly threats, a joy in its snowy whiteness, that register happily with those that can take it.

Like a lion March has come upon us! Furious, rampant, eager to conquer, it has come from its lair in the north, and with icy mane and frosty paw has come down on us with all its wintry might.

The very name of the Apostle of Ireland was prophetic of his life and labors. Patrick was a name that belonged to the patricians of ancient Rome.

Eighty years did Patrick labor for his children in Christ. He asked for no reward save the assurance that Ireland would cling to the Faith, that his converts and their offspring would preserve the teachings of Christ.

There are many things which seem to us mistakes and which we call such, but if we understand the designs of God we would call them graces.

Calpurnius and Conchessa knew little of the career of holiness and service that awaited their son. God's ways are beyond man. Every Christian father should strive to know his sons and daughters in a way that will make them ready for whatever call God may give them.

Preaching On War

By REV. JAMES M. GILLIS, C.S.P., Editor, The Catholic World

In the New York Times a short while ago appeared a letter to the Editor by William Lynn Phelps expressing the views of many Catholics and others in their country who are opposed to the war.

Experience shows it is but an empty dream to expect a real settlement to emerge at the moment when the conflagration of war has died down. The day on which victory dawns may bring triumph to him who has won it, but there is danger for him in that moment a new conflict has begun.

Quite obviously therefore the preacher especially the priest, cannot in conscience preach the subject of war and peace, or of the duties of a citizen and a reasonable critic as Dr. William Lynn Phelps.

Time to Check Up

JUST AS A YEARLY MEDICAL EXAMINATION IS IMPORTANT TO OUR PHYSICAL HEALTH -

SO DOES NOT BRING THE OPPORTUNITY TO INSURE OUR SPIRITUAL HEALTH! We wonder whether Marshall Goring, during an British air raid on London, was ever asked to check up on his spiritual health.

Telephone Catholics Frances and Mercedes were knitting awfully fast for the telephone. The telephone rang and Frances answered it. When the name came back she was again comfortably engaged on the telephone.

When you are a telephone Catholic, you are a telephone Catholic. You are a telephone Catholic. You are a telephone Catholic.

The Living Church

By REV. BENEDICT EHMANN

So far the discussion of the living church has been confined to the chapters of the Holy Scriptures. These chapters are the chapters of the living church. They are the chapters of the living church.

The living church is the living church. It is the living church. It is the living church. It is the living church.

The living church is the living church. It is the living church. It is the living church. It is the living church.

The living church is the living church. It is the living church. It is the living church. It is the living church.

The living church is the living church. It is the living church. It is the living church. It is the living church.

Still Hitting The Button

By REV. DANIEL A. LORD, S.J.

Once before I had occasion to say something toward the very important situation known as "the button."

As I read the squibs about them, both I thought of the difference in viewpoint between one great writer I once knew, since gone to God. He was a great business success, a man of organizing genius; but he was a failure in his business.
