Patrons of the Month: The Holy Kings

Intention of Prayers: Vacations for Missionaries

TO GOD

Song in song falls on my ears, Sweet beyond words power, Star on star glories disappears, Through life's ebb and flow.

Lips of angels and of men Speak words full of wonder, Eyes and hearts from fairy's glen Gaze into land and tender.

Mothers from heaven into view, Daily brighten father, Fresh with childhood's blessed dew, Sacred measure heater.

Wind and rain bring me the scent Of sweet fields of clover, And a little golden sun, Waits us in garden's bow.

Deep within my heart's soul, Where we have no feeling, One bright star is shining, One bright star is shining.

To read what is in a line, Just on life's last frontier, For I get swept up to you, You my God and Maker.

HAD OVERNIGHT CAMPS

The Denonville expedition came along the south shore and then went to Niagara with overnight camps about thirty miles apart. It returned to Fort Frontenac by the north shore and thence to Montreal. By this expedition more than two thousand men were brought to circumnavigate the lake. Some estimates of the numbers of this expedition go as high as 3,000. Every Frenchman with wilderness scout ability had been called in to help in this expedition. It was the greatest assembly of white wilderness scouts which ever took place in Monroe County.

It would be well if more of our modern scouts were like some of these able and intelligent men who could not read. And so these Denonville scouts did not and could not learn their scouting by reading a book in a scout room in a church basement, "by the doors of the word" not readers only.

ENGLISH USED DIPLOMACY

In some things trading is a poor substitute for actual knowledge. It should be recorded that the English used strong diplomatic pressure to cause the dismantling of Fort Frontenac after Denonville's expedition, but the fort was rebuilt by the French in 1695.

One result of these expeditions was that white men and Indians from far away places came to know the navigation of Lake Ontario, and soldiers were tempted to return to become members of Indian tribes. Another result of the inland middle trail, afterwards Denonville expedition was that it caused Iroquois Indians to withdraw from villages along the north shore of Lake Ontario so that Missasaga Indians of Algonquin blood came to take their place. The friendship of the Algonquins with the French began with Champlain and was much less likely to be diverted to the English than was the allegiance of the Iroquois.

SOLDIERS WIDEN TRAILS

Just as a trail broke through the wilderness by the heavy transportation of the men and machinery of a big lumber camp opens up an easy path for the canoeist and trapper to follow, so these military expeditions would widen and make crude roads out of the narrow portage paths around the rapids on the St. Lawrence River. The traveller now could find his way easily.

Before these armies had broken a wider path through the wilderness, the canoeist on the river would need to find the carrying place by noticing where the tar and pitch from bark canoes had been rubbed off on rocks and logs at the edge of the water. A broken twig, the ashes of a small fire, the cleanings of a fish, and a lightly tramped path showed the portage.

These armies, however, left portage paths over which small cannon, flat boats, and other heavy fort equipment could be dragged. Whereas travel to our Seneca County during the missionary period before the time of Denonville's army in 1667 was mostly by it was more by the St. Lawrence River and Lake Ontario.

FORT DES SABLES, NOW SEA BREEZE

Sea Breeze is the name of an amusement resort on Lake Ontario at the northwest corner of Iroquois Bay. Since 1900 with the development of motor car traffic a large village of public spirited suburban residents has grown up next to the amusement area, and the postoffice is called Sea Breeze. Sea Breeze in the "gay nineties" was connected with the city of Rochester by a ten mile narrow gauge steam railroad. There was courtesy between railroad presidents in those days, and rumor says that a president of this Sea Breeze Railroad traded a free pass over his ten mile line with the president of the Northern Pacific for a free pass on his road, or some such transcontinental line.

STRATEGIC LOCATION

Loyal residents of Sea Breeze will of course, say that a view of Sea Breeze was worth the difference in the values of the transportation exchanged. But even loyal residents of Sea Breeze do not fully visualize the romantic story of the ground on which they live. Sea Breeze was of strategic importance for two thousand years at least.

It is at the southernmost part of the great south reaching curve of Lake Ontario. A straight line from Nine Mile Point on the east to
