TO INVEST SCOUTS

By MARY CALFIELD

St. Monica's first Boy Scout Troop will be duly invested in the Tenderfoot Group on Sunday afternoon, March 30, at 2:30 P. M., in the parish hall.

The investiture ceremony constitutes the induction of the full troop of thirty-two boys. Monsigner Bergan, pastor of St. Monica's and chaplain of the troop, will bless the insignia and the neckerchiefs and will invest the boys with the neckerchiefs, symbolic of the Boy Scouts of America. Arthur Vay, district commissioner of the Sunset Division, will present the Tenderfoot badges.

The parish committee, of which Edward Lorscheider is chairman, consists of the following members: Emmett Norton, James Flynn, Ray Gugel, Frank Shaughnessy, Bernard Delehanty and Roman Heinlein. Ben Higgens is scoutmaster and Joseph Brennan is assistant scoutmaster.

The occasion will be marked by the presentation of the Troop Charter by Dan Karle of the Rochester Council. St. Monica's Holy Name Society will also present the Troop colors and flag at this time.

Immediately following the Investiture ceremonies, the boys will be escorted to the church by St. Monica's School Band, under the direction of Frank Melville. The Act of Consecration to Our Blessed Lady will be made during Benediction.

Rev. Joseph E. Vogt, Diocesan Chaplain of the Boy Scouts, and the Rev. Albert Simonetti, Area Chaplain, have been invited to the services, together with other Scout officials from the Rochester Council.

Parents of the boys in the new troop and all members of the parish interested in scouting will be cordially welcomed at this ceremony.

identity of a murderer. That's fine as long as suave comedians like Powell and Melvyn Douglas have the situation in hand. With Errol Flynn it's a different matter. Our Errol is quite a boy when he's battling off the villains with a sword but he's not so adept when it comes to parrying the repartee. As a comedian, he's completely stiff and self-conscious. Therefore, even if "Footsteps in the Dark" were a better story than it is, it wouldn't be seen at its best advantage with Flynn in the role he plays. But it's a very obvious mystery and the murderer turns out to be just who you thought even though the writer has hardly played fair by tossing in clues which are never explained.

Other Pictures

The series pictures go on and on. Besides the Hardys, there are other current examples. For instance, "Melody for Three" (A-1) is a Dr. Christian picture, with the good doctor still fixing things for the people of Rivers End. The story is saccharine and the dialogue trite, although there is some exceptional violin work by a youngster named Schuyler Standish. However the news that this is the last of the Dr. Christian series hardly comes as a startling blow.

There are always more to take its place. For instance, there's "Scattergood Baines" (A-1) which is to be a regular thing. Guy Kibbee makes a plausible Scattergood. And Chester Morris who made early crime melodramas like "Alibi" and "Big House" memorable, is now playing the title role in "Meet Boston Blackie," a routine second-rater. They tell us there will be more Boston Blackie spics, too.

How About Some Shorts?

The currently announced plan of producing a series of long "short subjects" to take the place of low-budget second features sounds like a good one to this department. There is an almost inexhaustible store of worthy short stories, and one-act plays that do not have enough material for expansion to feature length films but that would make much more easily digestible fare than some of the soggy second features that you find these days.

Paramount last year had a plan to release some outstanding pictures, cut to a length midway between shorts and features but with most of the meat retained. Among the pictures so released for use on double bills instead of some second features were "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," the Technicolor film starring Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda and Fred MacMurray; "Love Me Tonight" with Maurice Chevalier, Jeanette MacDonald and Myrna Loy; "Smiling Lieutenant" with Chevalier, Claudette Colbert and Miriam Hopkins; and "Farewell to Arms" with Helen Hayes and Gary Cooper. The plan was never tried in Rochester, although such a release should have more appeal than new pictures like "Golden Hoofs," "Blonde Inspiration" and "Footlight Fever," which are recent . . . not too horrible . . . examples of ordinary double bill fodder.

But there are some good shorts [illegible] and for some reason Rochesterians seem fond of them. [illegible] can generally find a pretty good short — travelogue, historical [illegible] or cartoon — at the Cinetury. The Palace has the March of Time and the Disney cartoons. The Little shows outstanding shorts of the past. But Loews Rochester, with a good supply to pick from, never bothers about them. The M-G-M short subjects department puts out the Pete Smith Specialties, which are unusual and clever short subjects as a rule.

The M-G-M Passing Parade shorts are always highly interesting and the current series based on predictions of Nostradamus are heralded as particularly good. The Crime Doesn't Pay shorts are usually well directed, well cast and twice as exciting as full-length melodramas like "Meet Boston Blackie." The new "Metroskopix," a three-dimensional novelty, is supposed to better the amusing "Audioskopix" which were produced a couple of years ago. Yet, Loews shows its two features, its newsreel—which is very complete, it must be admitted—but it skips all the good shorts. Nor is the Palace blameless. What has happened to "Information Please?" Such of these shorts as can be caught are usually worthwhile but Rochester seems to be missing out on a lot of them.

"Soliloquy"

Superb, supreme the structure stood,
A joy for e'er of stone and wood,
With mighty spires and rounded dome;
By man 'twas built for God a home.

The monarch and the nobles came,
And men who ever sought for fame;
To stand before the altar bright
And see and sound this King of Light.

While in the rear, within the gloom,
Where towering shadows leap and loom,
Wept one; beneath the organ's rumble,
Saying, "Blessed are the humble."

Holy Redeemer Parish

FAREWELL TO FR. SCHNEIDER

Departure ceremonies for Father Schneider took the form of a series of entertaining playlets and presentations on last Sunday afternoon when the school children honored the new Pastor of St. Joseph's Church in Wayland before the parish priests and parishioners in the auditorium at Holy Redeemer.

Presented by the people with a purse, and the recipient of a fine big easy chair as a gift from the school children, Father Schneider was given no chance to think that his sixteen years of service to the people of Holy Redeemer were not appreciated. He goes forth to Wayland with the prayers and best wishes the Priests, Sisters and parishioners of Holy Redeemer, and with the promise of many of them to drop in on him in their Sunday afternoon travels.

Easter Campaign

Robins may usher in the spring season, but to all Holy Redeemer Sodalists it is the announcement of the Easter Campaign that assures them that the rabbit season is just around the bo with a sigh and with a last deep breath for a final fling at Lenten penance, the good fellow and girl Sodalists are receiving their books of tickets this week on that huge Easter Bunny.

Easter Monday Dance

The calendar says it is time to be up and doing on Easter preparations, and so the Easter Monday dance committee is taking due warning and is now in the midst of the hustle and bustle attendant on dance preparations. An important meeting of the committee in charge has been announced by Co-chairmen Joe Zenkar and Evelyn Weber for 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, March 29, in the club rooms. Tickets, bids, and posters will be in the hands of the committee shortly.
