NCCW 'Call To Youth' Radio Addresses

Life's Highway 'Markers' Seen In 10 Commandments

The Ten Commandments constitute the "traffic code" on the highways of life, the Most Rev. Edwin V. O'Hara, Bishop of Kansas City, declared, April 19 in the "Call to Youth" broadcast of the National Council of Catholic Women.

Bishop O'Hara said there are "important highways in the social world and, unfortunately the traffic officers themselves, in many cases self-appointed, are only too often confused in regard to the code to be observed." Consequently it is not surprising that inexperienced Youth may often be misguided and stray from the right road," he added.

His Excellency said the most important roads in life "are the great historic highways numbered from one to ten built to last longer than the Roman Roads and governed by a code engraved on tablets of stone by the finger of God Himself: a code published by the great lawgiver, Moses." "Of these celebrated highways, Number Four ran through the happy land of childhood," he said. "Honor thy father and mother' was the traffic regulation written on the signposts and enforced by parental authority. This same broadens out in Youth but the sign now reads: Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's and to God the things that are God's.' Obedience to the precept of the Church and to the just laws of the state leads on this road to the realm of ordered peace which is the heart's desire of mankind."

"All these historic highways numbered from one to ten run through a terrain too difficult to allow any safe departure from them. Bishop O'Hara said. "though many alluring and cunningly marked side roads lead to the marshes of weakness and misery."

His Excellency said there are "pleasant minor highways which lead to happiness"—the "Attractive scenic highways of kindly hearts and sincere friendships"; that of "domestic enjoyment"; the "single lane road that leads to the priesthood and religious life"; another one way road with many lanes"—the road to marriage "to the home by the side of the road"; the highway that "leads past the parish church and school and rectory."

"But as all road builders since Caesar have learned," the Bishop continued, "no matter how straight a highway may be it must be kept guarded and in repair. In our Catholic Youth groups, there is provision for adult sponsorship—mature men and women whose responsibility is to keep the highways patrolled, the sign posts erected and well-lettered, and the detours carefully marked."

"It is hardly necessary to observe that for the multitude of our Youth in Catholic schools the teachers themselves consecrated to religious service, serve as traffic officers in the social world. But it is important that Youth groups who are not in Catholic schools or who have left the schoolroom for the larger school of life, should know that in every parish by the law of the Church, there is a traffic committee whose only purpose is to help them find the way. It is called the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine. Its duty is not only to organize classes in the traffic code of the Christian highways but to inform the traveler of the pleasant scenes of the country through which the road passes and to enable him to make provision for a happy journey under the maternal guidance of Our Lady of the Highway."
