Use the weapon of prayer to bring back peace to a world in terrible carnage, more than 600 members of Rochester Regiment, Knights of St. John were urged by the Rev. Arthur F. Florack, pastor of St. Michael's Church, as the knights assembled there Sunday.

At the consecration the uniformed knights stood in a line at salute. When time came for Holy Communion the men in orderly arrangements proceeded to the altar.

A message from His Excellency Bishop Kearney, expressing regret at not being present, was read by Father Florack. The message explained the bishop's absence and urged the knights to continue their filial devotion with renewed vigor.

Faith Bolsters True Democracy-Fr. Bergan

AUBURN—Doctors had to destroy religion before they could convince men to follow them in their dictatorial ways.

Speaking at the society's annual banquet at the Osborne Hotel, May 20, Monsignor Bergan stressed the necessity of religion and faith in God to obtain courage in these trying times.

Monsignor Bergan said in part: "Specifically we as Catholics realize that we are to worship God according to the teachings of our religion and we are confident that in following that religion, and living up to its teachings we are fulfilling in the best manner possible our obligations as American citizens. We profess a religion which teaches us love of God and love of fellowman. We are to live in peace with all men."

The essence of the church have attempted to brand the knowledge of God as a kind of government against another. The Church needs no special kind of government to serve the purposes of the world.

"The Church is concerned primarily with spreading the knowledge of God and his teachings as stresses the dignity of the individual man. The Church teaches that man has certain inherent rights which no government can take away from him."

"The reason why the Catholic Church is because all forms of government are opposed to the God-given rights of the individual."

"We as Catholics have a duty to render to our country and to our God and that duty is that we live the life of true Catholics, obedient to the laws of the State. It is our duty to impress others with the force and strength of our religion. In this chaotic world, religion is needed and by living each day in conformity with the teaching of our religion we will be rendering the best possible service to our fellowman."

Director Keeps 500 Players In Mental Catalog

The voices, characteristics and special abilities of over 500 actors and actresses are neatly catalogued in the brain of Hendrik Boraam, director of WHAM's "Manhattan at Midnight" program.

To begin with, the cast of the Wednesday night drama is changed weekly. When scripts are submitted to Boraam by his staff of writers, his impressions of the plots determine immediately the selection of talent.

Thus, all casting problems are practically eliminated, but only because the director knows at once the persons who will fit the four or five parts called for.

According to Boraam, very few radio players can do everything well; all of them have a specialty, but a few can handle any characterization. But his first interest is in producing a "custom-built" drama with all parts handled by just the right type of person.

Finally, rehearsals take up less than the usual amount of time.

Wishing Medal Brings Jone Allison Radio Job

Pretty Jone Allison, of "Home of the Brave," heard a voice of WHAM Monday through Friday, has only to wish on her magic medal to get a radio job if you don't believe it, ask Jone and you will.

When the youthful actress of that western drama, heard weekdays at 5:00 P. M. EDWJ, over the NBC-Red network, first elected to be a radio actress, she was discouraged because of a dismal paucity of assignments.

One day the Allison hired an Indian cook, who came complete with magic medal tied around her neck. Hearing Jone's plight, the kitchen squaw invited the little blonde actress to have a wish on her magic medal and promptly picked up a long telephone on "The Aldrich Family" program.

Another wish when the cook wasn't looking brought her parts on the "Helen Hayes Theater." These started a pleasant friendship with Miss Hayes, not only because of Jone's performance, but because she gave the star a pencil that clamped to her dress. Miss Hayes is famed for being her pencil at rehearsal.

Since it made such excellent medicine for Jone, the Indian decided she no longer needed the medal and gave it to Miss Allison for keeps. Jone isn't superstitious of course, but her study day since when she hasn't had a job was the one on which she left the tallman at home.

Phil Harris Explains Tardiness Phil Harris arrived at NBC's Hollywood Radio City, Sunday, just in time for the Jack Benny Red Net program, and went on without rehearsal.

"Sorry, Jackson," he told Benny, "but I'm appearing at the Paramount, you know, and they won't let me get away. They say I'm packing them in!"

"You don't suppose the picture has anything to do with it, do you?" Jack asked innocently. Harris retorted: "New. Just Bob Hope and Crosby and Dorothy Lamour in a thing called 'Road to Zanzibar'."

The wild scream that topped off Harris' remark came from Bob Hope, who was watching and listening from the control room while he waited for his own studio to be cleared for his Sunday preview.
