THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. LITE Chapter &, Verses L to y

While this everyle were presently upon Janus to hear the word of God, he was planeling by Lake Genanarcth. And he must two leads make mayed by the lake, but the feberman had gottlen and there are well as well washing their nets. And gottlen late one of the beats, he was that was limere, he hereaged main to put out a little from the beat. And citting down, he beand is beat the everyle from the beat. But when he had consed mending, he said to bloom, who said take his day, and fower year help for a make.

And himom necessary and sold in him, 'Manter, the whole night broad him any lested and said in him, 'Manter, the whole night wromen we have been and had a been and him a little post of the perfect of the net'.' And when they had done in, they melened a givat member of false, but their net was breaking. And they melened a state of computer in the other heads, so that they began to help.

But when Simon Peter saw this, he fell down at Josse' knees, saying, 'Depart from one, for I am a sinful man, O Lord' Ter had all the order of the his wall all the order of the his wall reader and se were also James and John, the wone of Scheder, who were partners with Minon. And Jenus said to Rimon, 'De not be atraid; henceforth thou shad estate men.' And when they had brought their seems to land, they left all and redowned him.

Catholic Missions JULY MISSION INTENTION:

"For the Compenion of the Meliamoudame" When one recalls the tenacity with which the Mohammedans the Prophet during the past 13 centuries he realises that both missionaries and faithful "must do violence to heaven" if these some 250 million souls would be won to Christ. The story of the founder of this religion is a famillar one but speculations will always exist regarding his sin-certly as a reformer. Was he a fanalle or a deceiver? That we cannot answer. However, there is no doubt of his conquest of territory and-saddest of all - of men. Inlem has been called "the sole secretion of an Arab brain," but the former caravan attendant saw before his death the subjection of all Arabia to his teachings. After his demise his folings. After his demine his tol-lowers awept into Mesopotamia, Palestime, Syria, and Northern Africa, their battle cry "death to the unbellevers" echoing through lands watered by the blood of Christian martyrs. The centuries-old concept Mohammedan conquest by armed force has proved its uselessness, not because Islam is lacking in courage but rather because time weapons to be employed against it are prayer and charity. The failure of the Crusades is but one proof in point, just as is the auccess of the gentle Saint of Assisi. Force may defeat force but it never conquers it and a sympathetic approach exceeds in power the clanking of armor and the clash of steel.

Today Islam, unwittingly or knowingly, stands at the cross-roads of history. Shall it transform the star and orescent into the hammer and the sickle or fatten them both into the sharp angles of the swantika? Politically, it must make a drastic angles or state them to the start of the swantika? decision; spiritually it must face the alternative of substituting godlessness for Allah or opening the windows of its soul to the bright stanlight of God's love. The missionaries are ready to supply the charity which the Mussulman has grown to know but his efforts must be supplemented by the prayers of the faithful to complete this apostolate in one of the most difficult fields in the reading an account in the New York Times, May 27 edition, of the "Sword and the Spirit" movement in Great Britain, and again when the headline "Presbyleriana Plan Wider Youth Educa-tion" caught our perusing eye. It appears that after years of cool tolerance by other Christian-acts, the Popes' stand on the rights of the "little man" has taken root and the Church today has won a double-header victory.

In Great Britain the leading ecclesiastics have joined in rais-ing a chorus for betterment of the "little man." The leaders of this effort mean to formulate a nost-war code that will win for the ordinary man a permanent status on the basis of the better-ment he is regarded as winning in this emergency.

The second feature discloses the educational plans of the Pres-byterians formulated at their General Assembly in St. Louis, Mo. The history of the Church's stand on the necessity of religious education goes back through the centuries. From time to time Her centuries. From time to time Her efforts and insistence have been repaid not by tributes of gratitude but by bitter injustices. But thore are names which shine from Her records because of zealous work in this field. Among of St. John Bosco canonized only seven years ago. He attained the glorious height of canonization for his efforts in behalf of the poor boys, the "little men" of the next generation whom he pro-pared spiritually, intellectually and physically for their work in the world. The hour of awakening from centuries' old lethargy has come, but, as always: the has come, but, as always: the Roman Catholic Church has already opened the way and chart-ed the course.

According To The Doctor

If hay fever sufferers want to escape the onset of hay fever, they must start now to take treatments which will help fight off the pollens from plants and weeds that cause sneezing, watering of the eyes, stuf-finess, running of the nose, and hoarseness.

Hay fever is described as a catarrhal condition of the mucuous membranes of the respiratory tract, eyes and nose. It is sometimes accompanied by fever and asthma. It occurs annually and affects different people at different seasons. The apring variety of hay fever is usused by the pollen of a tree and
