PIONEER COLORED CATHOLIC HONORED

In the graveyard of Old St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, memorial services were held at the recently discovered grave of Pierre Toussaint, former Haitian slave who died in 1853, after amassing a fortune in Manhattan as a hairdresser and giving most of it to charity. Shown placing the wreath is Henry L. Binsard, managing editor of "The Commonwealth," and great-grandson of Louis Rimes, former head of the trustees of the Old Cathedral and friend of Toussaint. Others shown, left to right, are Charles McTague, Seton Hall College student who located the long-forgotten grave; Rev. John LaFarge, S. J., Editor of "America," and chaplain of the Catholic Interracial Council, under whose auspices the ceremonies were held; Margaret McCormack, who read a commemorative poem; and Rev. Leo S. Cannon, O. P. (N.C.W.C.)
