Library Habits Developed At Falls School

Reading Guided

A marked improvement in the library of St. Patrick's School, Geneva Falls, was noted as the fall semester opened. Many new books have been added to the library's collection.

Ethics of library usage has been promoted among the younger pupils through the guidance of the older students. It is reported at the schools.

As a result of these improvements St. Patrick's School looks forward to a year of more intellectual and useful library and reading habits.

THE STAR GIVER

Hurry, hurry... Come to me... I want you to have this gift... Breathing became so difficult, his lips remained silent while courage came and went... I'm getting sleepy, Julia... Each word brought a tremor of pain to speak meant to speak... and yet it meant so much to him... It was the night when she made its second appearance... The time a lone girl made her way to those lying figures... Head high, chin out and her eyes were dry... She still kept looking straight ahead... her eyes lowered... "John, John... Speak to me!"... She was no longer a brave woman... "Oh, dearest John..." She raised his head, gently... "Oh, God, I wish to get here in time... Please, let me speak to you... As if in answer to her prayer, Kent's lips moved... But, words failed to come... "John..." She kissed his mottling lips... Again and again she claimed his lips... She felt no response... When Kent's eyes opened, they closed and opened again... finally they remained wide open... "Julia..." he whispered... "Is it really you?" He wanted to get up... but a firm hand held him down... "You, you look like an angel, Julia..." Julia could see his eyes blurred... "I'm here with you... Can't you see me? Can't you feel me?" She kissed him and ran her fingers through his tangled hair... "Julia?"... "Yes, John..." She pressed his face against her... "I'm his wife... He could only whisper... He managed to find her hand with his free hand, and pulled her hand close to his mouth... "Can you hear me?" he asked... "Yes..." A far-away voice told him... "The first time I met..." he recalled... "It was a night like this..."

Remember... She did... And do you remember what you said about the stars? "We made believe that the stars belonged to you. And you surrounded the stars to watch over me." Her voice broke. She sobbed, cradling him, gently... Her words brought a flickering smile to his lips. He said, "One thing I never knew, Julia." "Knew what, John?" "I'm jealous..." He tried to laugh... "Jealous?" "Yes... I'm jealous of that man..." "What man?" "The man in the moon," he retorted. "He's a queer chap. He can turn a lady's head. But my twinkling stars guarded you. Didn't they?" She laughed through tear-filled eyes. "Silly!" "Julia, are you alone?" "Yes..." "Didn't you bring Father Smith?" He looked worried. Life was passing away... and now he wanted a priest... "He'll be here soon. I left word at the church." Relief shown on Kent's white face. "I knew I could count on you," he said. "You're good, Julia. And I have a present for you." She saw the clenched fist rise; she saw him smile. "This is for you!" He opened his hand and Julia saw... An empty hand! "Why don't you say something, Julia?" Kent whispered. "It's a real star! I got it for you while I was on duty earlier this evening." His face became quiet. Nothing moved; even the air became still. "Flying up there so near to the stars, I thought of you. It was easy. All I had to do was to reach out and pick myself a star!" Julia couldn't talk. She cried. "I'm tired... I-I can't see, you Julia. Tell Father Smith..." His heart stopped beating. His eyes closed while his last words said: "AW I had to do as to lean out and pick a star... It was easy." When Father Smith arrived, he found the still form of John Kent, lifeless. He saw, too, Julia's rosy resting in Kent's hand... While Julia cried, Father Smith spoke the words that opened the gate to happiness; happiness that all can have who believe in Him via His helpers that bear the name of peace and love; that name begins with Father and ends with joy!
