Missioners Stand Pat Amid Dangers In China

TECHINGU There are no dangers or difficulties which can prevail upon the missionaries of the Nanking Mission to give up their work and return to the homeland...

On the contrary, Monsignor Megan, who is a native of Eldora, Iowa, writes 'we are hoping that new Fathers may join us from abroad...'

'War and political upheavals may retard the growth of the mission work,' Monsignor Megan says...

'The missionaries have been admonished by our own government that our continued presence in China was not conducive to our personal safety...'

'In such times of momentous and far-reaching decision, the individual missionary looks to his ecclesiastical Superior for direction and guidance...'

'Seemingly contrary to the virtue of prudence, the missionary must be reckless with his life...'

'The missionary of today must not be too much concerned about his bodily life and safety and must trust to the definiteness of his calling...'

'The missionary of today must not be too much concerned about his bodily life and safety and must trust to the definiteness of his calling...'

'The missionary of today must not be too much concerned about his bodily life and safety and must trust to the definiteness of his calling...'

DEATH OF PHOTOGRAPHER OF THE HOLY SINDON

VATICAN CITY The death has occurred in Turin of Adorato Secondo Pia, who in 1898 photographed the Holy Shroud, venerated relic in which the Body of Our Lord was wrapped...

Following his discovery, Signor Pia showed the negative to Cardinal Richelmy, then Archbishop of Turin, and from that moment the photograph he had taken became a part of the investigation and studies regarding the sacred relic.
