CARDINAL ORDERS STRICT CHURCH MUSIC REGULATION

QUEBEC—Recommendations of the Archdiocesan Sacred Music which prohibit the use in churches of the Archdiocese of a number of well known musical compositions including the Wedding March from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream," have been brought to the attention of the diocesan clergy by His Eminence Rodrigue Cardinal Villeneuve, Archbishop of Quebec with the order that they must be followed.

He recalls that he has on several other occasions expressed the laws of the Church with regard to liturgical music but that abuses have been too frequent.

Reminding the clergy that they are masters of the liturgy in their churches, His Eminence warns that the laity who often arrange the programs of sacred music must be advised of the liturgical rules.

40th PUBLICATION

Chicago.—With the appearance of the pamphlet "Friends and Enemies of Happiness," the second of a series which will form a digest of the Summa Theologica of St Thomas Aquinas, the Rev Albert H Dolan O Carm, of Englewood N. J has completed his fortieth publication, it is revealed by the Carmelite Press of Chicago in a compilation of its activities since it was founded by Father Dolan in 1928.

Fr. Baker's Homes Offer Services To President For War Orphans

LACKAWANNA, N. Y.—The facilities of Our Lady of Victory Institutions here, also known as Father Baker's Homes of Charity, have been offered "unreservedly" to the children of American soldiers killed in this war, in a letter addressed to President Roosevelt by the Rev. Joseph E. McGuire, Superintendent.

Father McGuire also offered to care for destitute or near-destitute adult dependents of soldiers killed in battle, although the institutions have been devoted to the care of children only in the past.

"We believe it obligatory on every American citizen and institution," Father McGuire wrote, "to do everything possible to give those doing the actual fighting the greatest mental freedom possible. We believe a soldier will be a better soldier, will help us the sooner to forge a total victory over the forces of darkness, knowing that if the enemy does remove him from the field of battle, his loved ones will be taken care of."

Stating that the offer "applies to destitute dependents of any American soldier regardless of race, creed or color," Father McGuire said the Homes, with certain changes, could accommodate more than 1,000 additional children and a like number of adults.

A CHILD IS ENTITLED TO RESPECT

By EMMA GARY WALLACE

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association, 8 West 40th Street, New York City. These articles are appearing weekly in our columns.

There are some grown up persons, both parents and teachers who seem to take it for granted that a child should be ready at any time to let others know exactly what he thinks and how he feels and to reveal any and all of his faults and weaknesses. When one comes to think about it to demand this of a child is surely taking an unfair advantage of him since he is by no means the older person's equal in worldly wisdom.

A noted psychologist advises persons who are in charge of children, not to feel free to prod the child to reveal what he thinks, or whether he likes his father or his mother better or to drag his short-comings into the open. He declares that one of the ways in which parents and teachers can exert a "tremendous" influence in guiding children, is to help the boy or girl make his own adjustments, but that to do this does not mean that the child should be required to make a display or an exhibit as it were, of all he thinks or all that he has done.

Even the law of the land recognizes the right of the individual not to make statements which can be used against him. Sometimes, to be sure, it is desirable that a child shall tell quite fully what he has seen or done in order that those in authority may understand and govern their own actions accordingly. But in any case, we must not take from the child that very precious individual possession his own self-respect.

As a usual thing, the confidence of the child may be gained and held easily by the one whom he respects and who respects him. Sometimes the child will not be ready to reveal what he has in his heart and mind at once. We are a good deal like that ourselves—desirous of keeping our impressions to ourselves until we are in a revealing mood.

Many a child has told untruths as a method of defense against a sudden demand for information. Dr. John J. B. Morgan, Professor of Psychology at Northwestern University, declares that a study of at least 2,500 children in the university's psychological clinic, convinces him that many mental ailments of adults could have been avoided by proper early guidance in the home and schoo.

The responsibility of parents and teachers is indeed great. As far as possible, we should encourage children to be frank but should seldom force a confession. We should teach them to be hopeful, to expect justice and a square deal. It is better to err occasionally in giving the child the benefit of the doubt than to give him the feeling that he has not been fairly dealt with. When a normal child knows that we trust him, he will try to measure up to what we expect, and eventually that which is true and noble within him will grow and bear the finest find of fruit.

Students Pledge Spiritual Works of Charity For Year

WASHINGTON—As a spiritual New Year's Resolution students of the National Catholic School of Social Service have joined in an anonymous League for Spiritual Social Work, the purpose of which is to perform regularly some spiritual works of charity.

Aside from the social services which the students render daily to those who need their help, members of the League for Spiritual Social Work have made the following promises: To say three Hail Marys daily, during a visit to the Blessed Sacrament made especially for that purpose, for those who are in need of help; to offer a Holy Mass and Communion each week for those who need help, and to have offered once during this year a Holy Mass for the eternal salvation of themselves and of those they are trying to help.
